DEDICATION

To the Van Deursen Family in general, and, in particular, to my nephew, William Albert Van Deusen, who is preparing himself to take up this work where I lay it down, I affectionately dedicate these volumes.

PREFACE

The compiling of this family history was undertaken with the object of preserving for future generations the results of nearly twenty years' gleanings in the field of genealogical research. The work has been done during the odd moments of a very busy life. It had its inception in the endeavor to learn when and from whence came the first of my name to New Netherland, and then to connect with this parent branch that offshoot which, after the War of the Revolution, settled in Canada,* and of which I am a scion.

It has been a fascinating work and full of pleasure; the measure of success which I obtained luring me on and on, encouraged as I was, also, by the assistance of the Reverend Roswell Randall Hoes, Chaplain in the United States Navy, and himself an able genealogist, who pointed out to me where to find rich harvests of data relating to the Dutch in America. In the military field I profited much from the experience of Dr. Charles E. Godfrey in his investigations of Colonial and Revolutionary military data, and I have sought to make my work a valuable book of reference to the family and others on this particular line. Also, daily contact for a number of years with Algernon Aikin Aspinwall, Esquire, of Washington, D. C., historian of the Mayflower Society and of his own family, kept the subject uppermost in my mind, and I paid frequent visits to New York and the towns and cities bordering on the Hudson and Mohawk Rivers, in the upper counties of New York State, wandering along the frontier of Canada from Cornwall to Toronto, examining the records of church, town and county on my way, in all their lines.

Soon I had a vast collection of data too valuable to be kept for my sole pleasure, and the problem of publishing it in permanent form confronted me. To undertake the cost unaided was out of the question with my means. At this juncture Henry Sayre Van Duzer, Esquire, then President of the Holland Society of New York, volunteered material aid to back up his personal desire to have my material published; which offer was accepted. Thus the work began to take definite shape, and I realized the importance of still closer research and the interchange of data with other investigators whose lines were allied with mine. In this I gratefully acknowledge the courtesy of William Becker Van Alstyne, M. D., of New York City; the Reverend H. Van Allen of Utica, N. Y., both of whom have considerable data upon their families who intermarried with Van Deusens; Mrs. Elizabeth Allison (Crissey) Van Duzer of Warwick, N. Y., who rendered valuable aid in the research on her branch of the family, the Van Duzers of Orange County, N. Y.; also the assistance rendered by Mr. Dingman Versteeg, Archivist of the Holland Society and a native of Holland, who carefully read and corrected that part of my work covering the Dutch period; also the editorial work of Mrs. Ada F. De Laney of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has edited and revised the entire work.

My visit to Holland in search of material is fully described in the Itinerary of my Journey, later on.

I do not claim infallibility or completeness for my work. Both are open to the future; and as I have arranged for the further carrying out of the work later on, any corrections or additions to names, dates, or families will be gladly accepted for future use. In this light I commend the results of my labors to the kindly criticism of my readers.

ALBERT HARRISON VAN DEUSEN.

THE VAN DEURSENS IN THEIR BRABANT
HOME

Ancient Map of the Peel Landt surrounding the town and Castle of Deursen.

CORRECTIONS
VOL. I, P. XV.

The ancient home of the Van Deursen family is at present a small village called Deurne in the Netherlands, province of Brabant, commonly called North Brabant, in contrast with the South Netherland (Belgian) province of South Brabant. It lies a few miles east from the city of Itelmond on the edge of a moorland named the Peel.—De Boer, April 3, 1914.

THE VAN DEURSENS IN THEIR BRABANT HOME

BY LOLLE PIERS DE BOER, L. L. B. (LEYDEN, 1905);
M. A. (YALE, U. S. A., 1910)

The ancient home of the Van Deursen family is at present a small village of 407 inhabitants, called Deurne-les [near]-Diest, in the South Netherlands (Belgian) Province, Brabant; commonly called South Brabant, in contrast with the North Netherland (Dutch) Province, North Brabant. It lies not far from the town Hasselt, on a little stream on $5^{\circ} 5' E.$ Longitude of Greenwich and $51^{\circ} 3' N.$ Latitude.

In the Germanic tongue of the inhabitants themselves it is called "Doersen," and also by the Northern Dutch; but these have the oe or ö sound of the symbol eu and spell the name "Deursen" (For the history and the meaning of the name see Appendix 1 to this article).

The earliest inhabitants of the country adjacent were a Celtic tribe, the Belges, who came in contact with the Romans during Julius Caesar's Gallic warfare (Gaii Julii Caesaris: "de Bello Gallico Libri").

The name Deursen itself keeps the memory of these early Celts alive. The word "Dur" means "water," of which "Deursen" is a locative form, "a place by the water." The Romans found a large moor here and called it a "palus" (moor), from which the present name, "the Peel" or "Peel land," the surroundings of Deursen, is derived. The word also remains in the name of the village "Pael," a little east from Deursen.

About the year 1800 (and still) the moor proper was about four hours long. The Peel land measures from north to south eight hours, from east to west six hours, the distance being measured by the ordinary walking of a man in one hour. Sometimes it is so many "pipes," i. e., the time allowed for the smoking of a certain sized pipe (J. Kok, "Vaderlandsch Woordenboek" [National Dictionary], 1791, XXIV, p. 2).

After the breaking up of the Roman Empire, the Franks conquered the country in the fifth century; and at least the nobility here, among whom is found the family Deursen, can be said to be from pure Germanic, Frankish stock.

The Peel land was, in the Carolingian times, A. D. 800, a part of the jurisdictional region "Toxandria," which formed the greater part of what was afterwards the dukedom of Brabant.

The breaking up of the Carolingian Empire (never a strongly united federation), A. D. 900, brought to light a great many more or less independent lords, of greater or less degree, who would be united under the rising feudal system.

In 1196, during the time of the third crusade, we find mentioned a Hendricus á Doersne (Hendrick van Doersen). It is not unlikely that he was in the crusade, and that the cross in the Coat-of-Arms was taken up by him.

During the next, the thirteenth century, members of the family are frequently found in the "meyery van's Hertogenbosch" (the majorate of Bois-le-Duc), the part of Brabant in which Deursen lies, and where the lords Van Deursen kept up a kind of sovereign independency until the year 1325.

On the 1st of March, 1325 (a date according to old Frankish custom), Govert Van Doorsen acknowledged for his liege-lord Jan III, the noblest duke Brabant ever had, who, with rare perception for those times of the natural human rights, and far ahead of his day in his method of governing, granted on his deceased father's and his own initiative, a liberal Charter to his subjects in 1356. This Charter served the Dutch as a model in 1581, when they began their struggle for freedom more systematically. It was "a cornerstone in the bulwark of Dutch liberty," and, through its silent influence, takes a not inconsiderable place in the constitutional history of Western Europe and the rights of man all over the world (See Appendix 2 for the liege lords of the Van Deursens and the early Constitution of Brabant).

Govert Van Doorsen received back his ancestral property immediately in 1325, as a hereditary feudality, and it thus remained in the straight male line until the end of the 16th century (J. Kok, Vaderl. Woordboek; also J. B. Rietstap. Waperbock v. d Neo Adel, I, p. 94, 95. For the history of the land and castle of Deursen, from 1325 to 1788, see Appendix 3).

Under Jan the Third's daughter, Duchess Johanna, who died in December, 1406, Jan Van Deursen, possibly the grandson or great-grandson of Govert, became lord of Deursen. He married in 1419, Aleid van Bloemensweerde, and from his time on there is no break in the family line down to Abraham Pietersen van Deursen of 1607, and through him down to the American posterity. So far as can be ascertained from the above authorities, the only available sources of information in this country, the following is the line of descent.

1. Jan, who married Aleid van Bloemenswerde. Their son,
2. Jan, married Aleid van Dompseleer (see Appendix 4) had son,
3. Jan, who married Wilhelmina van Zoudenbalg; their son was
4. Nicolas, who married Machteld Proeys; their son was
5. Jan Willem, who married a daughter of Gerritt van Heusden; their son was
6. Jan, who married Elisabeth Van Heusden. This Jan was alive in 1550, and was the last male descendant of Govert who held the ancestral seat, the lands and castle of Duersen. His mother and wife were both from the old renowned house of Heusden, for which reason he took the famous "wheel of Heusden" into his Coat-of-Arms (see Appendix 5). His son
7. Hendrick was born in the old Castle. The Spanish troubles account for the loss of the ancestral possessions by Hendrick, the details of which are still to be found (see Appendix 3). It is not unlikely that Hendrick was the first protestant of the family. When the people saw their lord a protestant in those trying days, they, too, were emboldened to openly avow their faith. The protestant church at Deursen bears witness to this. It was one of those small communities, which once promised so much for the cause of protestantism in the South Netherlands. Many of them were crushed down by the Spanish yoke between 1550 and 1600, but a few of them, also in Peel land, have survived amidst an entire Catholic population up to the present time. A protestant church exists still in Deursen (see David Van Haagstraten, "Groot Woordenboek" [Great Encyclopedia], 1733, III, p. 76; also J. van Oudenhoven's "Beschryving van 's Hertogenbosch [Description of Bois-le-duc]). Hendrick became "drossaert" (head-magistrate,—somewhat like the English justice of peace) of Asperen, in Brabant. He did not adopt the alterations and additions made to the family Coat-of-Arms by his father, but returned to the original, a copy of which appears as frontispiece to this volume. He died at Asperen in 1567. His wife was Maria Rutgers (see Appendix 6). They had one son,
8. Willem, who married Elisabeth Gysberts and had son
9. Pieter, who moved from Asperen to the Province Holland in 1581 and became Magistrate in Haerlem in 1583. His son,

10. Abraham, was born in Haerlem and baptised there 11 Nov., 1607 (Records of the Grootkerk, Haarlem; see quotation of same in biographical sketch of Abraham Pietersen Van Deursen). He married Dec. 9, 1629, Tryntje Melchior, also of Haarlem, and soon after emigrated to New Amsterdam, America. They had six children, all born in America, whose biographies will be found in the American section of this volume.

A brief outline of the history of the last four of the above generations will be found in the second part of this article—"The Van Deursens in Haerlem, Holland," where the argument in favor of this line of descent is also given.

THE VAN DEURSENS IN HAERLEM, HOLLAND,
1581-1636

Since 1581, when the States General of the United Netherlands had foresworn Count Philip, King of Spain, and the Duke of Parma had been sent to the Netherlands with Spanish troops for "pacification," the South Netherlands, especially Flanders and Brabant, felt the full pressure of a sixteenth century war. In the North almost all had enjoyed the possession of political and religious freedom. In Brabant catholics and protestants, royalists and republicans mingled together. All alike were robbed and murdered there by the Spanish soldiers, nor could the Spanish generals do anything to prevent it. In fact they owed these hirelings wages of many months, and being unable to pay them, in fear of mutiny, they allowed them this systematic plundering as a recompense. The land was laid waste and uncultivated for many years. The Civil magistrates in Brabant and Flanders were under military pressure and had kept or retaken the side of the King and the old faith. To make an end of the confusion one element at least had to be eliminated, and, therefore, from many Brabant and Flemish cities all protestants were banished. This involved the best classes of society. The high nobility and great landowners sided with the King. But the younger branches of these families, who, according to the custom, had kept magistratures in town and country, and formed the most intellectual and independent class of society, all took the side of the Republic. The Van Deursens had left the former class and joined the latter, just one generation before the trouble broke out at large. The Spanish reinforcements under the Duke of Parma replaced all such magistrates, who had not fled already, by weak willed royal tools.

Next to the magistrates were the great commercial men, who, finding no property safe and trade impossible, joined the common cause. A third useful element, on whom the banishment fell were the artists and craftsmen.

Intellect, capital, and labour, the very blood and nerves of the nation, left the unfortunate Provinces to Parma, and thus tacitly encouraged the economical and spiritual suicide of the nation. The economic balance once being broken, the emigration went on, even after the direct causes were removed, until 1616; the Chronicles of Holland and Zeeland containing for the period 1580-1620 many petitions of those exiles for safeguard and settling in the North Netherlands, made to the Prince of Orange, the local governments or the Count of Leicester. Most of them went to the towns of Middelburg, Dordrecht, Leyden, Haerlem and Amsterdam (see Kronyken van het Historisch Genootschap [Chronicles of the Historical Society], Utrecht, 1853, p. 8: P. J. Blok, History of the Netherland people [translation from the Dutch], Vol. III, chap. IV: J. H. Koenen, Fransche Vluchtelingen in Nederland [French fugitives in the Netherlands], 1846). In these authorities the French and Brabant fugitives, their quantity and quality, their motives and influences are ably compared and treated.

In Holland, Zeeland and Friesland these exiles were warmly received as brethren in the faith, as valuable reinforcements for State and Church, as increasement for Statecraft, Commerce and Art. The average Brabander at that time made a better magistrate and scholar, the average Fleming a better trader and craftsman, than the North Netherlander. In culture his superiors, they soon brought the docile Northern Dutchman up to their standard, and to them may be accredited the reorganization of the North (Hugode Groot [Grotius] Nedrl. Historie, Book V, pp. 100, 329).

The Brabanders felt their mental superiority so well that in the newly organized government of Holland they soon were ahead of the native provincial Hollander, and to the fact that they turned all their energy toward the public welfare only, is due that they did not rouse the jealousy of the older inhabitants sooner than they ultimately did.

With the Brabanders once settled in Holland the various towns helped each other to establish government fairly and to a fair end. But the monopolizing of the public offices by the Brabanders finally aroused complaint, mention of which, about the year 1586, occurs in P. C. Hooft's "Historien," p. 1107. In Amsterdam and Utrecht this even went so far that by enactment all original Brabanders were excluded from public offices during the first five years of their residence in those cities (see Kron. Hist. Gen. Utrecht, 1855, p. 229-238; Prouink's letter of 1586).

In one of the lists of petitioning Brabant exiles to Prince William of Orange in 1581, we find the name of Pieter Van Duerse, coming from Asperen in Brabant. Evidently he was a son of Willem Van Doerse, drossaerd of Asperen, who was the only son of Hendrick Van Duerse, also drossaerd of Asperen, who died in 1576.

We do not find to which city in Holland he intended to go. Perhaps he did not then know himself. Haarlem was a place most favoured by Brabant settlers just then (Haarlem's Handvesten [Haarlem's Constitutions], April 24, 1580).

By 1580, the Haarlem city government, which had long kept a doubtful position, had finally become a strong protestant and republican body ("Haarlem's Handvesten," Oct. 13, 1586, p. 351, 352).

Among the strangers put into the Haerlem Government by Prince William of Orange, Oct. 21, 1583, was Pieter Willems ("Haarlem's Handvesten," p. 333, 334). "Pieter Willems" might be an accidental combination of those two common Dutch names, and the person a different one than Pieter Willems Van Duerse, but the fact that the same Pieter Willemsen is called on p. 421 of "Haarlem's Handvesten" the son of Willem Hendricksen, the fact that he was a stranger admitted to a Haerlem magistrature by the Prince of Orange, in 1583, the fact that many Brabanders were placed in Holland magistratures, often within the first five years of their residence (otherwise this stated term would not have been fixed by Amsterdam and Utrecht), the fact that in 1581 Pieter Van Duerse from Asperen (the son of William Van Doerse of Asperen) petitioned the Prince of Orange for settlement in Holland, the fact that this Willem was the son of Hendrick Van Duerse of Asperen, all speak in favour of the identity of Pieter Willems Van Duerse of Asperen, 1581, and the Haerlem stranger Pieter Willems of 1583.

According to his father's and grandfather's (died 1576) age, Pieter could not have been much older than twenty-five years at that time; nor younger, as the post was not open for men under the age of twenty-four. At the time of his son Abraham's baptism, he must have been a man between forty and forty-five years old. Abraham Pietersen was baptised

11 Nov., 1607, and the date of his marriage, 9 Dec., 1629, makes it probable that he was baptised not long after his birth. But the possibility is not excluded that he was born a few years earlier.

The family belonged not to the Walloon, but to the Dutch Reformed Church. A complete table of contents of its Baptism, Marriage and Burial Records are found in "de Navorscher," 1900, p. 555, 566. In the Remonstrant and Contra-remonstrant doctrinal quarrels the Van Deursens sided with the former, as did most of the old Brabant protestants. These quarrels greatly influenced the inland politics of the Netherlands, and formed a fruitful source of pretext to depose the magistrate of Brabant origin, as soon as found to be a Remonstrant.

In Haerlem the Magistrature was at first in the hands of the Remonstrants. In 1615, alarmed at the increase of the opposite faction, they took care that a Remonstrant clergyman (domine) was appointed, and that in 1617 the Church rules of 1591, which could be favorably interpreted in favour of the Remonstrants, were brought into action. This was changed in 1618 by the coup d'état of Prince Maurice of Orange, changing the magistrates in many Remonstrant cities. In Haerlem this occurred 24 October, 1618, at which time Pieter Willems Van Duersen must have been a man of about sixty (J. Kok. "Vaderlandsch Woordenboek," 1788 [National Dictionary], XIX, p. 115, 116). In January, 1629, the year of Abraham Pietersen's marriage, the Remonstrants in Haerlem were still so strong that the new government feared they would regain their seats. This did not happen, however, and the Remonstrants (mostly protestants of Brabant origin), and among them the Van Deursens, were, and remained, excluded from public office.

This exclusion was quite a humiliation for many of the old families, who were wont to rule, and may have been one of the reasons why Abraham Pietersen Van Deursen determined to emigrate to New Netherland in 1636. His father, Pieter Willems Van Deursen (for the new spelling since 1618 see Appendix I), if still alive, would have attained the venerable age of eighty at the time of his emigration, but more than likely the old exile had already passed away.

I. THE HISTORY AND MEANING OF THE NAME "DEURSEN"

The name "Deursen" is a derivative of the Celtic word "dur," which means "water," the Germanic, and especially the Frankish locative ending, "en," making it mean "at the water," "a place at the water." River and place names with "dur" are frequent in all original Celtic regions. Dordrecht means Dur-track—water track or ferry. In England many examples of the same kind may be found, Durham meaning Dur-home—an abode by the water. The linguistic changes caused in the word as a whole by this ending, which, in turn, originate the many different spellings, are due to the working of two laws. The first, which tends the most to transform the word beyond recognition is the rule that r between two vowels shows an inclination towards rs, z and s. This will best be illustrated by comparison of the German "waren," "verloren," "hase," etc., and the English "were," to "lose," "hare," etc. The name of a Dutch village near Dordrecht,—Dur-en,—became Dur-sen and then Dus-sen. This process was already in action when the name Deursen was first entrusted to writing, but was not yet of sufficient force to make the new pronunciation in spelling prevail over the old one. Forms of the name with r, rs, and rss (ss was meant to render the z sound), occur from 1196 down to the present time. The form with r, however, was always, and rightly, considered to be the older, but wrongly to be the better of the two equals. Writers nevertheless could not get away from the popular pronunciation with rs. So we find the names even of the oldest known members of the family spelled "Duerse," "Doersen," or "Doorsen," when occurring in the vulgar; but "Duere," "Doerne," or "Doorne," as soon as written in Latin documents; although occasionally even the Latin give the former spelling—the older form admitting the rs.

In the Latin work of Dan'l. Heinsius: "Rerum ad Sylvam—Ducis Libri," 1629, we find it spelled "Dorna," "Doersa," and even "Deusa."

In "Castella et Praetoria Nobilium Brabantiae," by Jacob Brn. LeRoy, Leyden, 1699, p. 133, we find "Doirne, vulgare dictum Doorssen."

In "Groot wereldlyck Tooneel des hertogdoms van Brabant," the Hague, 1730, prt. IV, plate 8, we find "Duerne ofte [or] Doersen."

In "Vermakelyk Brabant," by de Cantillon, Amsterdam, 1770, prt. IV, plate 2, we find "Prospectus castelli Doirne" (view of the castle of), and on the engraving "t Kasteel Doorssen" (the castle of). The description going with it, on p. 52, so reads: "Doerne of [or] Dooersen."

In "Aardrykskundig Woordenboek" (Geographical Dictionary), by S. Gille Heringa, Utrecht, 1874, p. 50, under "Duerne and Liessel" we find: "Deursen and Deurne are promiscuously used."

The other law at work here concerns the essential vowel "u" (pronounced like English oo, in "book"), and its spontaneous change to oo (like English o in "open"). Both u and oo changed by the "umlaut" influence (an anticipation of the e of the second syllable while still pronouncing the u or oo of the first syllable) into Ue or Ooe (oe); pronounced somewhat like the ir in "third." The Brabanters, like the Germans, preferred for this sound the symbol oe, while the Hollanders used the symbol ue, and then eu, by metathesis caused by analogy with the spelling of the other Dutch diphthongs.

It can be said in general that under aristocratic and hierarchial influence the South Netherlands kept conservative in every respect. They kept the old spelling system long after living language had changed the spoken words, as modern Flemish still shows. In the young Republic of the United Netherlands, however, the democratic spirit broke with many an empty conventionality. Early in the seventeenth century a new spelling was adopted, more phonetically rendering the language of the people. The famous "Staten-Translation" of the Bible at Dordrecht in 1618, though written in elevated style, was one of the first works to use this popular spelling most successfully.

The spelling of the name "Deursen" is according to this system, and can be said to be fixed by that time as far as the North Netherlands were concerned.

The different spellings of the name have been stated, and here and there (but unphilologically) treated by the following authorities:

David van Hoogstraten's "Groot Woordenboek," 1733, III, p. 76: Vorsterman van Oyen's Wapenboek, I, p. 198, 199: J. B. Rietstap's Wapenboek, I, pp. 9, 94, 95: "de Navorscher," 1883, p. 282, also 1884, p. 101: Nyhoff's Oorkonden, V, p. 60.

2. THE LIEGE LORDS OF THE VAN DEURSENS AND THE EARLY CONSTITUTION OF BRABANT

The deathbed of duke Jan II of Brabant can be said to be the cradle of Dutch freedom,—documentary at least. Not by force, nor by remorse, he gave in 1312 the Charter of Cortenberg, but because he was convinced that he could have done more for the people during his life, had he allowed them to take their natural share in public affairs. This he desired his son, Jan III, to do from the beginning of his reign.

The Charter established for Brabant the Council of Cortenberg, which, since 1312, met every three weeks in the cloister of that name. It consisted in the beginning of only four representatives of the land owning nobility, and ten of the towns, to wit: for Brusselles, 3; for Louvain, 3; for Antwerp, Tienen and Leeuwen, one each.

Acting on his father's principles, Jan III enlarged the composite parts of this Council by Charter of 1314, giving it a trial of six years. when, by request of his liege lord, Charles IV, the German Emperor, he was induced to give "the Golden Bill." Jan III reigned from 1312 to 1355, and in 1325 Govert van Doorsen acknowledged him as his liege lord.

Before his death the duke called the representatives of the seven large and thirty-six smaller cities of Brabant to a meeting in Louvain on 8 March, 1354. In May the nobility joined this meeting. His desire was to frame a Constitution whereby each of his subsequent successors in the dukedom should be sworn in by the Council and succeed by their consent only. He left it to the judgment of the Council to carry out this principle in the case of his only daughter, Johanna. Such a one was the first liege lord of the lords van Deursen.

Johanna was sworn in after her father's death in 1355, and her long (over fifty years) reign proved as beneficial to Brabant as was promised by the happy auspices under which it was begun. She and her husband Wenzel, duke of Limburg, made their Constitutional "joyous entry" (Blyde Inkomste; Joyeuse Entrée) in 1356, which took the place of a feudal coronation.

The Constitution was sworn anew and extended to Limburg. Johanna died, blessed by all who knew her, 1 December, 1406. Some of the succeeding dukes, not of old Brabant origin, tried to weaken the Constitution now and then, but their financial dependency upon the people's representatives prevented this. The guaranteed rights proved stable even in the hard days of Granvelle and the Duke of Alva, the Spanish military Commanders in the last years of Charles V.

Not before the inauguration in 1555 of Philip II as duke, who, as monarch of a world empire, could not be troubled with "formalities" in such a small political community (!), was the constitution broken; a beginning as bad for the people as the end was for himself in 1581 (Blok. History of the Netherland People (translated from the Dutch), III, p. 34-36. See also Poullct, "Histoire de la Joyeuse Entree de Brabant").

3. THE HISTORY OF THE LAND AND CASTLE OF DEURSEN 1325-1559, 1559-1788

Govert van Doorsen and his ancestors had the full jurisdiction of Deursen and the neighboring borough of Liesel until 1 March, 1325. Entering the feudal community of Brabant at that date it became a branch of the jurisdiction of that dukedom. Until 1397, possibly the year of the death of Govert's son and successor to the domain, Deursen and Liesel remained one. About that time a tendency to combine began as far as the larger feudal estates were concerned; the smaller ones showing an opposite tendency, an interesting phenomenon in the growth of the modern Western European States. Deursen and Liesel were then separated, and the lands divided between the sons of the late lord. The old Castle of Doorsen held a strong strategic position. Amidst its moors it could hardly be taken by siege, and as a retreat for troops it governed the whole Peel land. In the frequent wars between Brabant and Guelderland during the fifteenth century it proved a valuable stronghold. But in those wars the younger branches of the family living in Liesel and other neighboring places often had to suffer from the enemy. After the duchess Johanna's death in 1406, the dukes of Guelder made war again under pretention of right to the succession. Philip of Burgundy had succeeded to the dukedom of Brabant, and in April, 1435, complaints of the plundering done by the Guelder people were sent to him by several lords, among whom were Hendrick van Dorsen and Gheenken van Doirsen his brother, members of the younger branch. These quarrels lasted until 1516, when Charles V, as heir of Burgundy and duke of Brabant, succeeded in the dukedom of Guelder. Since 1350 the lords of Deursen had two castles in Deursen. The old one amidst the moors, being the strongest, was used only as a fort. The other, dating from Govert's time, stood a quarter hour's distance East from the Church of Deursen (i. e., walking distance). It was surrounded by a broad moat, which enclosed some fine gardens. Both these castles were burned by the Guelder people in their last attacks, in 1512. Of the old fort nothing was left. The other castle, however, was not wholly destroyed. It was immediately repaired, much altered according to the requirements and style of the time, and made into a comfortable home. Except for some small changes in woodwork, barns and bridges, the castle was then much as it shows in the engraving of 1689. Jan van Deursen, the last male descendant of Govert to hold the ancestral castle and lands, must have died here between 1550 and 1559, and his son Hendrick removed to Asperen by that time. The year 1555 seems to be the most probable for such a radical change. Philip then succeeded his father, Charles V, as King of Spain and Prince of all the Netherland, also as Duke of Brabant, and scorned to take the Constitutional Oath. Many Brabant nobles criticised this sharply. Philip, however, had the power, and he who did not like his tyrannical ways could go. It is not known who was lord of Deursen immediately after Hendrick left. Most probably one of the king of Spain's favorites, for in 1559 we see that the local civil jurisdiction of Deursen was changed into a high criminal court. The number of criminals seemed to increase in the Netherlands after the Spanish got foothold there. However it be, Philip died in 1599, Prince Maurice of Orange won the great battle at Nieupoort in 1600, and the victorious States of the Netherlands owned Brabant as a conquered province in the beginning of the seventeenth century.

About that time we find several members of the younger male, as well as female branches of the family, living in the old neighborhood, and claiming the land and castle of Deursen. In actual possession of them at that time we find Jhr. Wolfert Everard van Wittenhorst, son of Walraven van Wyttenhorst and Maria van Doersen (elsewhere called Maria van Doerne). His cousin, Jhr. Everard van Doerne, lord of Liesel, of a younger male branch, claimed the lordship of Deursen from him. The case was brought before three high arbiters: Hendrick van Holtrys, commander of the Teutonic order at Gemert, Jhr. Wolraven van Erp, lord of Erp and Vechel, and Jhr. Godert Oudaert, lord of Rikstel.

The case was decided in favour of the Lord van Wittenhorst on 22 October, 1607. This date was just three weeks before the birth of Abraham Pieters van Deursen in Haerlem, who, as straight male descendant of the older branch, in other circumstances would have been the heir of the land and castle of Deursen. Wittenhorst remained lord of Deursen, which now passed completely out of the possession of the male line of the family (See "de Navorscher" [The Investigator], 1893, p. 525). On 5 May, 1618, pecuniary satisfaction and restitution was finally paid to the claimants of old. A copy of the documentary evidence of this was printed in Nyhoff's "Oorkonden," III, 1886. In 1619, the new lord's only daughter, Margareta Wilhelmina van Wittenhorst, succeeded her father and became lady of Deursen (see Archives of Deurne). She was married twice: first to Jhr. Arnold Huyn van Gelyn, by whom she had one son, Johan, and second to Karel Diderik, baron van Pallandt, by whom she had one daughter, Isabella Francisca. Lady Margareta survived her last husband and died in 1660 (see Nyhoff's "Oorkonden" I, 108.)

The heavy mortgage on the estate was paid off on behalf of the heirs, but the money had to be repaid. In the same year, 1660, Deursen was sold, and was bought by Rogier van Leeftael. In 1678 the jurisdiction of Deurne and Liesel, reunited in 1559, was again separated by the upper lords, the States General of the United Netherlands, although the right of having each a bench of its own was not used until some years later. New domestic buildings in the Castle yard were added in 1689 and an engraving made of the whole Castle, mainly the same as when it was restored after the fire of 1512. This engraving occurs in "Castella et Praetoria Nobilium Brabantiae," by Brn. LeRoy, Leyden, 1699, p. 133. The Coat-of-Arms of Leeftael, the then possessors of Deursen, occurs on this engraving. The same is reprinted in "Groot Wereldlyck Tooneel des hertogdoms van Brabant," the Hague, 1730, prt. IV, plate 8; also in "Vermakelyk Brabant," by de Cantillon Amsterdam, 1770, prt. IV, p. 52, pl 2, from which last the accompanying reproduction has been taken. Deursen, and also Liesel, belonged to the Leeftael family until 1730. From Seuljar van Leeftael it then passed to a certain Mr. Koeymans. After him Theodoor de Smeth, lord of Alphen in Holland, Schepen of Amsterdam, became the possessor; from him it passed into new hands, in which it was still in the year 1788 (J. Kok, "Vaderland Woordenboek, 1788, XI, p. 187, 188)."

In "Brabantia Illustrata," 1705, p. 133, under the view of the Castle Deursen, is a description of the Castle in Latin, French and Dutch, the first lines of each gives us the location and orthography of the Castle: "Doirne, corrupte Doorsen; Praefecturae Pelan diae" etc.; "Doerne, et par un mot corrompu, Doorsen, Village de la Majeurie du Peland" etc.; "Doirne, qualijk gesegt Doorsen, een Dorp van de Meyerye van Peland" etc.

4. THE BRABANT FAMILY VAN DOMPSELAER

The Brabant family Van Dompseleer (of 1400) is found in Harderwyck, Guelderland, in 1600, and was related with the Van Rensselaer as well as with the Brinck family (Navorscher, 1876, p. 338, 347; 1879, p. 41-46). The Van Dompseleer arms are: a red anchored cross on silver field.

The Van Rensselaer arms are: a silver anchored cross on red field (Theodore Van Renesse, "Dictionnaire des Figures Heraldiques," Brussels, 1894-1903).

5. THE WHEEL IN THE ARMS OF HEUSDEN

A pretty legend to account for the wheel in the Heusden Coat-of-Arms is as follows: A certain lord of Heusden went off to the crusades, followed, without his knowledge, by his faithful wife in the disguise of a page. Going in search of his page one evening he entered a tent and found the "page" busily turning a spinning wheel, and the disguise was broken. To honor his wife's bravery and love, the lord of Heusden took the wheel into his Coat-of-Arms. The story has been prettily written in a Dutch ballad.

6. THE BRABANT-NEW-NETHERLAND FAMILIES VAN ELSLANDT AND RUTGERS

Like the modern Dutch settlers here, the older ones liked to live in groups, formerly inhabiting the same regions in the Netherlands. The difference in dialect and customs between the provinces accounting for the fact.

That two of Abraham Pietersen Van Deursen's sons, Jacob and Melchior, both married women with Brabant family names, shows that the Van Deursens were not the only Brabanters in the settlement at New Amsterdam, and that they remained faithful to their Brabant traditions. Jacob's wife Catalyntie, belonged to the Brabant family Van Elslant; Melchior's wife, Engeltie Rutgers, was probably of the same Brabant family as his grandfather's grandmother, Maria Rutgers, wife of Hendrick Van Duersen of Asperen in Brabant.

A description of the Van Doersen Coat-of-Arms can be found in J. B. Rietstap's "Armoirie Generale" I, p. 553, but more complete descriptions, with references to the family to which the arms belonged are in: Pistorius' "Rerum Familiarum Belgicorum Chronicon magnum," Frankf. o/M., 1734 (not available here). According to Eduard de Block's Armorial des Princes du Sang Royal de Henault et de Brabant, 1900, there occurs a cut of the Coat-of-Arms in Bosman's "Armorial ancien et modern de la Belgique, 1889" (not available here). A picture of the Coat-of-Arms with the addition of the wheel of Heusden occurs in "Het wapenboek van den Nederlandschen Adel," I, pl. 23, but this description of it, given by the same authority on pp. 94-95, is less correct.

ITINERARY OF MY JOURNEY TO HOLLAND

ITINERARY OF MY JOURNEY TO HOLLAND

It was my hope to be able to trace, by personal investigation in the Netherlands, the ancestry of Abraham Pietersen Van Deursen; or, failing that, to learn something of the land of our forefathers, their history, character, and present-day aspect. Accordingly, I sailed from New York late in the summer of 1907 for Antwerp.

As we entered the River Schelde and headed for Antwerp, I noticed the low lands on either side, and saw through the trees picturesque little clusters of houses, all lying below the level of the river. This gave a curious effect. Antwerp is, perhaps, one of the most appropriate cities in Europe for an American to visit first, for it has so ancient a history,—leading back into the Seventh Century,—and, in the old parts of the city, so mediaeval an aspect, that the traveler is at once steeped in the atmosphere of “old, forgotten, far-off things.”

Like all of the Netherlands, Antwerp is rich in splendid paintings. Van Dyck, Rubens, Teniers (father and son), and other celebrated artists lived and worked in Antwerp. The Cathedral, which is Gothic in style and begun in 1352, contains Rubens' famous “Descent from the Cross.”

In Antwerp, as in so many parts of the Continent, the Police Department serves as a sort of combined Directory and “Who's Who.” At the offices of the Department one may find a record of every person residing within its bounds. At the Stadhuis Bibliotheek, or Town Hall Library, are “Adresboeken,” from which I gathered many names in the various towns I visited. In the Adresboeken at Antwerp I found the address of a young lady, a Miss Dimphina Van Deursen, living then at St. Jacobsmarkt, 2, and I decided to call on her at once. She lived in the home of the proprietor of one of the pleasant little taverns which abound on the Continent and in England, and are so different from anything to be found in the United States. I had an agreeable and interesting visit, although I was obliged to take with me someone to interpret us to each other, for Miss Van Deursen speaks no English.

She was born in Rosendaal, Holland, June 15, 1882, the daughter of a skipper, and is a dressmaker by occupation. She gave me the names of her father and mother of their other children, of her grandfather and grandmother, and of several uncles, with the addresses of two of the latter.

The following morning I started for Rosendaal. Upon my arrival I found that Karl Ludovicus Van Deursen, one of the uncles whose address Miss Dimphina had given me, lived some distance from the hotel where I was staying; so I engaged a cab and was driven for several miles through what seemed to me like a continuous garden.

The roads in Holland are paved in the center with stone blocks, or bricks, with a deep water drain on either side, and the sidewalks of smooth, hardened soil. As we drove along I noticed the neat farm buildings of brick, with peaked roofs, red tiled, and the beautiful flower gardens. The surrounding fields were rich with grain, some of which was reaped and standing in front of the houses in shocks for drying; while in the pastures were herds of beautiful Holstein cows, looking like ebony, with a white sheet tied round them, and all as sleek as if they had been groomed.

My possible kinsman, Karl Ludovicus Van Deursen, keeps a tavern, and over his door was the sign with his name and a white swan painted on it. His wife told me he had gone to Essen, a few miles south, and just over the Belgian border. I met him, however, returning on the road, my driver recognizing him as he approached us on a bicycle. We then returned to his house, where I was pleasantly and kindly entertained, and we made an appointment to meet at my hotel at Rosendaal.

While at Rosendaal, we had our photographs taken, and I copied the inscription on a medal which had belonged to the father of Karl Ludovicus. I also visited the Stadhuis (Town Hall) and copied some records found there of the family of Van Deursen to which Karl Ludovicus belongs. In an Adresboek at the hotel where I stopped I found a number of names of Van Deursen in Noord Brabant.

My next trip was to Rotterdam. It is a picturesque city; a combination of the Middle Ages and the modern world; as are most of the cities abroad. The old part of the town received its first privileges as a city in 1270, from Floris V, Count of Holland. The Boymans Museum has a fine collection of paintings by old masters, including Rembrandt, Rubens, Cuyp, Jacob van Ruysdael, and many others. I saw here the statue of Erasmus, who was born at Rotterdam.

At Rotterdam I visited an old windmill, dating from 1736. I climbed high up the steep, worn steps, a hand-rail on one side only, picturing in my mind the while its counterpart of the same date, in which our Ancestor, Abraham Pietersen, ground the flour of the Dutch West India Company at New Amsterdam, far across the Atlantic. It was very interesting to examine the machinery which had been in use from before the time when steam power was first utilized. The wind is the great servant of man in this flat country, where there can be no water power. This old mill is called the Colvert Molen. Similar ones may be seen frequently as one passes through the country. Among all the crafts and occupations of a technical nature, throughout the middle ages in contempt by a haughty nobility all over Western Europe, there were three which did not share the disadvantage of this prejudice. These were, in the first place, the art of shoemaking, the so-called "gentle craft," whose patron, St. Crispin, was of noble blood. This circumstance combined with the fact that the work could be done while sitting down, thus giving opportunity for meditation, and the philosophical and poetical disposition of many shoemakers, helped to make this craft an exception to the general rule. Of this Thomas Dekker's comedy, "A Shoemaker's Holiday," gives a fine literary picture.

Another esteemed occupation was that of blacksmith, for was he not the one who made the glittering steel blade, the sword, the companion in war? Did not his craft furnish the splendid armour, the shield and helmet for the arraying of the knight? The third occupation, the very nature of which led to its estimation, was that of miller. Especially in the Netherlands, the grinding of the grain was, during the middle ages, the monopoly of the lord of the village. Thereafter, until the great French revolution, the monopoly of the local civil magistrate. All the wheat of the year's harvest had to be brought to the village mill to be ground, and a certain (in most cases a rather high) percentage was charged for grinding it. After the feudal times proper, the overcharge was replaced by direct local taxes on the flour produced, the flour being afterwards returned to the owner of the grain. But as there often was no immediate need for the flour nor that the particular flour from the original wheat should be returned to its owner, the miller bought the grain in many cases, and became in that way the only flour distributor of the village, which made him in wintertime and famine somewhat the "bread lord" of the whole community.

The village miller held, so to say, a local civil office. In feudal times a younger son of the village lord was frequently placed in this capacity, who, if not directly practising it himself, derived at least the profits of it. This accounts for the numerous trade-names as: Van der Meulen, Van der Molen, Vermeule, Molenaer, Mulder, Muller, etc., among the younger branches of noble houses in the Netherlands.

The office was so profitable that after the feudal times the village burgomaster, instead of selling the office, as had become customary then, retained it with all its benefits to himself.

Rembrandt's famous picture, "The Village Burgomaster," shows us such a well-to-do miller, whose face expresses the satisfaction and confidence of his influential position in the district. Rembrandt could know well his type, for he was a miller's son himself and his wife a burgomaster's daughter.

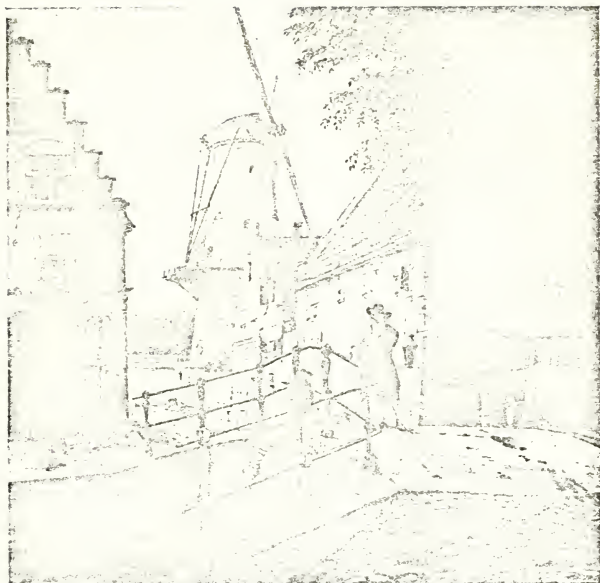

In New Netherland the same monopoly of grinding was retained by the patrons or by the local magistrates for a good many years; one of the first protests of the New Netherlanders being against this medieval institution, and its abolishment being one of the first political economical victories of the democratic ancestors of the future American nation. The official Miller for the Dutch West India Company was a personage of standing in the Colony, and such was Abraham Pietersen Van Deursen.

But to return to my journey.

From Rotterdam to the Hague is but a short trip. It derives its name from its long-ago fame as the garden or pleasure place of the Counts of Holland—'s Graven Hage. It is now the residence of Queen Wilhelmina, and the capital of South Holland. In the Mauritshuis (built 1633-1644 for John Maurice, Count of Nassau) is the Picture Gallery, which contains, as its chief treasures, eleven paintings by Rembrandt. There are here also some Spanish royal portraits by Velasquez, and a painting of the Madonna by Murillo. In the Royal Library, wherein are many priceless old manuscripts and volumes (among them a Gospel of the Tenth Century, a prayer book belonging to Queen Isabella of Castile, 1450, and a Bible with the autograph of Queen Mary Stuart of Scotland), I hunted in the Adresboeken for names of Deursens and was rewarded by finding a number.

Many cities and towns which I visited will abide as pleasant pictures in my memory, but here I can only mention briefly a certain number of them. I found more diversity among the country people; their appearance, actions and vocations interested me. All cities are more or less common to one another.

To speak of Leyden at once suggests the famous and terrible siege of 1573-1574 by the Spanish, which was finally ended by William the Silent. For their brave defence of their city, it is said that William offered the people of Leyden their choice between exemption from taxes for a number of years or the establishment of a University, and that they chose the latter. Be that as it may, William founded the University of Leyden in 1575, and it speedily took its place among the great and older Universities. On its registers I found recorded the fact that Marcellus Albert Van Deursen was graduated here on November 10, 1790, which seems to indicate that the surname was a fairly ancient one in Brabant. At this University also Dom. Everardus Bogardus, the first recorded minister of the Dutch church at New York, was a student and a graduate. He baptized some of the children of Abraham Pietersen Van Deursen and Tryntje Melchiors in New Amsterdam.

Just across the street from St. Peter's Kerk in Leyden I saw the house which was built in 1683, on the site of the one where John Robinson, the leader of the first Puritan party exiled from England, lived, taught and died (1611-1625). A tablet on the house and another on the church itself commemorates him, and Leyden should ever hold a warm place in the heart of Americans as the refuge of so many of their Puritan forefathers. There was also another of those interesting old windmills, "De Valk Molen," bearing the date of 1743 and the names of Adrian and Pieter Van de Venter. A visit to the Library and examination of many reference and genealogical books failed to bring to light, however, any trace of Abraham Pietersen.

My next objective point was Haarlem, and, since it was from there that our Ancestor came to America, I looked forward with keen anticipation of what I might find at that place concerning the family. The journey was a pleasant one. Everywhere the scenery is certainly picturesque, though with a certain sameness about it, and like a well kept garden. Numerous ditches and drains carry off the water from the farmland, while on the side of the ditches grow trees of uniform size and height, with few branches excepting at the top. The roads are raised from eight to twelve feet above the farmland, and have a perfectly smooth surface which would delight the heart of the bicyclist or motorist. On either side of the road are grassy slopes, terminating in rows of trees in straight lines, and planted at uniform distances apart. These mark the course of the roads in every direction, turning in graceful curves. The farm houses have all lovely flower gardens, kept with exquisite neatness, as is everything about the farms; and indeed one cannot but remark the cleanliness and order of both town and country life in Holland. The streets of the cities are usually very narrow and tortuous, rivalling the proverbial ram's horn, but order and cleanliness reign supreme.

I reached Haarlem on the evening of August 29, and found the town preparing for a holiday; August 31 being Queen Wilhelmina's birthday. On the following morning I visited the Archivist, Mr. C. J. Gonnet, to whom I made known my errand to Haarlem, leaving instructions with him to search the records for information of Abraham Pietersen, to which he cheerfully assented. To him we are indebted for the baptismal and marriage records of Abraham Pietersen, recently received. My own investigations were not productive of the result sought, as I found nothing of importance of an early date, but I obtained information for future investigation, if the records I sought came to light. Everywhere the officials showed me the greatest courtesy, giving me all the assistance in their power. I spent several hours at the Stadhuis Bibliotheek, or townhall library, where the Adresboeks are kept. Since my visit to Haarlem, however, the baptismal and marriage records of Abraham Pietersen have been found in the registers of the Groote Kerk, certified copies of which will be found in the biographical sketch of Abraham Pietersen. I now recall my visit to this beautiful old church with great interest. Its ecclesiastical name is St. Bavo, and it was built at intervals from 1397 to 1520. It is about four hundred and sixty feet in length, and has a tower two hundred and fifty-five feet high, which was completed in 1519. It contains many beautiful works of art; among other things a magnificent organ, constructed in 1735-38 by Chris. Mulle, which was long considered the largest and finest in the world. Abraham Pietersen lived on the Groote Hout Straat, or Great Forest Street, from which the spire of the Groote Kerk can be seen as one walks along it. Tryntje Melchiors lived on the Smede (Smith) Straat, which also terminates in the Groote Markt or square, in which stands the Groote Kerk. The group of buildings in this square is probably the quaintest in the country and comprise the Groote Kerk, the Stadhuis, and the Meat Market, the latter being erected by Lieven de Key, the famous Dutch architect, in 1602, 3, and has recently been restored and fitted up for the National Archives. In fact the whole town of Haarlem is built of quaint old houses of brick and hewn stone, and is one of the cleanest and most attractive towns in Holland. The origin is said to have been a brick castle built on the river Spaarn by Heer, or Count, Willem as his burg, and its name to be derived from the word Heer and the last syllable of Willem—Heerlem or Haarlem (city of Lord Willem). At any rate it is very old, being a municipality in the twelfth century and its warriors taking part in the Crusades. It has always taken an active part in the wars which have distracted the brave little country at various times and at one period of its history was surrounded by ramparts, the sites of which are now covered by well kept gardens and promenades. It, too, sustained a calamitous siege by the Spaniards, during the War of Independence, and was taken after seven months resistance, in which even the women took a share (1572, 73). Its brutal captors massacred the Commandant, part of the garrison, and two thousands of its inhabitants, besides inflicting the death penalty upon 1735 persons, according to the official statements. During the seventeenth century it recovered its prosperity, many famous painters living here, among them Frans Hals, who ranks next to Rembrandt as a Dutch colorist.

Every lover of flowers knows that Holland is the home of all bulbous plants, and I cannot leave Haarlem without speaking of this industry, for which it is famous. It has several thriving manufactories of various kinds, but its chief income may be said to be derived from the cultivation of bulbs, which it supplies to every town in Europe and North America. About the end of April, and from that on, whole fields of hyacinths, tulips, crocuses, anemones, lilies, and other bulbous flowers surround the town. The sight and perfume is one for the imagination, not to be described. I was too late to see the early show, which must be gorgeous in the height of the season, for the Dutch are adepts at massing and blending colors. This industry is a very old one in Haarlem, and as early as 1636 became a sort of mania, the bulb market becoming of as much importance as any grain market ever was.

From Haarlem I went to Amsterdam, which is only about a half hour's ride in the train; arriving there about nine o'clock on Saturday morning, August 31. The ride between the two cities was very interesting. Canals and watercourses abound in every direction, some of the watercourses being raised above the level of the farmland, with windmills at frequent intervals to pump the water up to higher levels, to be carried out to sea. Not a particle of dust came through the car windows, which were very large and opened from the top, letting in plenty of fresh air and sunshine. I spent four days and a half at Amsterdam, the day after my arrival being Sunday, September 1. While there I spent several hours each day with Mr. Paul T. Kapteyn, genealogist, who helped me look over the old records, which are written in old time Dutch, and perfectly unintelligible to me, of course. He did not find anything of importance, however. In the interval of waiting I wandered around this interesting old city, the commercial capital of Holland, and for centuries one of the wealthiest cities in Europe. It is intersected everywhere by canals which divide it into as many as ninety islands, connected by three hundred bridges. The houses are all built on piles driven deep down to the hard sand underneath, sometimes as much as sixty feet. I visited the Oude Kerk, built about 1300, and containing some beautiful paintings and stained glass windows by old masters; the Nieuwe Kerk, built in 1480, containing also many works of art, among them a monument by R. Verhulst to the celebrated Admiral de Ruyter and a beautiful stained glass window, the gift of Queen Wilhelmina, whose coronation was held in this church; the royal palace, which was built originally for a town hall, about 1648, and presented by the town to King Louis Bonaparte in 1808 as a residence; the Dam, or old embankment protecting the city from the sea and from which the name of the city is derived, and upon which many of the city's principal buildings are situated. Then there is the magnificent Ryksmuseum, with its renowned collection of works of art, among which is the celebrated "Nachtwacht" (night watch), by Rembrandt, who resided in Amsterdam. It was in Amsterdam, too, that Queen Wilhelmina's coronation festivities were held,—a great day for the quaint old city. But to the American the center of interest lies in a narrow little street called "Engelsche Pelgrims Steeg," for in it the protestant refugees from England made their home when they arrived in Amsterdam in 1609, many of them living there until they emigrated to America in the Mayflower September 6, 1620. Amsterdam and Leyden are enshrined in the hearts of many American descendants of those pilgrims, and of all who know the story of their sufferings and exile, and never can the hospitality of Holland be forgotten,—a safe shelter in the time of that terrible religious storm!

I now turned my steps to Utrecht, stopping off on my way thither at Baarn, near where is the residence of the mother of the Queen of the Netherlands. It is not open to the public, so I had to content myself by looking at the building over the iron fence, and admiring the magnificent and stately trees which line the street in front, and just inside the gate. They must have been fully a century old. After spending a couple of hours strolling about the place while waiting for a train, I went on to Amersfoort, where I spent that night. The streets there seem to run around like the rim of a wheel, and, as is usual in Dutch streets, are paved with brick. In the morning, at nine o'clock, I left for Utrecht, reaching there about ten. At the station there I met an old sailor who had been to the United States and had lived in Minnesota, St. Louis, New Orleans, and New York, and could speak English quite well. He walked me around for a couple of hours, showing me the place. The same narrow, crooked streets, with canals and bridges, prevail here as in most other cities in Holland. It is one of the most ancient cities in Holland, a church being founded here about 630 by Dagobert, King of the East Franks, and in early history it has been famous for its beautiful churches. The weather had been rainy for a couple of days, which interfered somewhat with my tramping about, but I spent one day and a night at Utrecht, waiting for some word from the Archivist at the Hague, but none came, so I decided to return there and hunt him up. Accordingly, I boarded the train for Rotterdam at 9:30 the following morning, September 6, reaching there before noon and taking the train right on to Hague, where I arrived at 1:30. In the afternoon I saw the Secretary of the Central Bureau of Genealogy and Heraldry, but learned that they had no data bearing on my branch of the family. I got some dates, however, of church records, baptismal and marriage, and information as to research. After a trip to Scheveningen, a seaside resort near the Hague, I passed the night at the Hague and returned to Rotterdam the next morning, stopping at Delft for a couple of hours on my way back, and continuing my journey through Rotterdam to Dordrecht, which I reached in early evening and had time for strolling around a while before retiring for the night. The next day, September 8, I took a trip by boat up the Merwede to Gorinchem, which I enjoyed very much, and while strolling about the streets came across a Café Restaurant, kept by G. Th. Van Deursen, so I went in to see him and found that he was born in Gorinchem, and that his father was from North Brabant. It did not take long to see all there was to be seen in the quaint little old town, so I returned to the steamer and remained on it till it reached Rotterdam, from thence returning to Dordrecht, enjoying the day on the water highly. Church steeples and windmills were nearly always in view, as hamlets and villages were passed on the way back and forth, and the river was full of boats of all sizes, busily plying about, indicating a commerce which this thrifty people and country enjoy. It is no wonder that the Dutch settled in New Amsterdam; its magnificent harbor and waterways must have been very attractive to their eyes.

On Monday, September 9, I left Dordrecht for Rosendaal, arriving there about 10 a. m. The crossing of the long and celebrated railway bridge over the Hollandisch Diep was of much interest, and I had time to take it in fully as the coupling of two cars separated, causing a delay upon the bridge and some little alarm among the passengers, who were not allowed to leave their compartments. As I approached Rosendaal from the opposite direction from that which I took when there at the beginning of my trip, I was interested to note the difference in the appearance of the country. The land is much higher, not so much water, and some of the land seems to have been left to grow into bush to recover its strength, after long cultivation. At Rosendaal I made for the Stadhuis, and managed to make them understand my wants. I found, however, that the records of Deursen, prior to 1810, were not there, but at 's Hertogenbosch, and are written in old Dutch, so that I could not make much out of them, although I went there to see them. About five o'clock on that same day I arrived at Ravestein, on my way to Deursen, which is about half an hour's walk further on. I stayed over night at Ravestein, at the Hotel Keurvorst Van De Paltz, kept by Henri Van Hall, who had lived in Montana for twenty-one years and, of course, spoke English fluently, as also his wife, a very intelligent woman. They were quite interested in my errand and knew who I was as soon as I mentioned Abraham Pietersen and Deursen; another member of the family having been that way a few days in advance of me and told them of me. Mr. Van Hall is an invalid, but Mrs. Van Hall very kindly walked with me to Deursen, the following morning, and acted as my interpreter to the pastor of the church there. I found him, as I did the officials everywhere, most courteous and ready to give me every assistance. He readily brought out the church records, which are copies of the originals, but as they do not go back of 1675 they were of no use to me in tracing Abraham Pietersen and his ancestry. On our way back Mrs. Van Hall stopped at a convent on some business, while I took another route to Ravestein and explored the country round about it, getting back in time for an excellent dinner, after which I took a bicycle ride to the nearby town of Nijmegen, situated on the river Waal. There was nothing in the name of the river to suggest that I was gazing on the waters of the historied Rhine, yet so it was; Nijmegen being quite near the German border where the Rhine enters Holland, and, after flowing peacefully along for a few miles, divides into two branches, the largest of which is known as the Waal. From Nijmegen I took a trip across country to Arnheim, situated on the other branch of the Rhine, the Neder Rijn, and in the midst of beautiful scenery of a different character to the usual flat country, the natives calling it "mountainous." The town is somewhat hilly, the first I had seen in Holland; otherwise the streets and general appearance was much the same as other cities. Its environs make it one of the most attractive places in Holland, however. I spent the remainder of the day riding from one point to another, seeing all there was to be seen in so short a time, the bicycle enabling me to get over considerably more ground than I should without it. I returned to Ravestein to spend the night with the Van Halls and left there the following morning for 's Hertogenbosch, to see what I might find in the records there. Arriving at that place I went at once to the Stadhuis and made known my errand to the officials, who rendered me all the assistance they could, but, as I mentioned before, the records are all in old time Dutch and I could not do more at that time than get posted on what was there and how to proceed with a more extended research, through others, at some future time. I copied a few items as to the church at Deursen, the list of pastors from 1600 to 1828, and found that the records of baptisms there date only from 1704; too late for that of Abraham Pietersen to be among them.

I had now gone over the ground I set out to cover, but without attaining my object, viz., to find the ancestry of Abraham Pietersen Van Deursen. My visit to Holland had, however, shown me where to concentrate any research which might be undertaken in the future, and given me an insight into the cradle of the family. Two years and a half after, and when the results of my twenty years work was being prepared for the press, the records of his baptism and marriage were found at Haarlem, just in time to be incorporated into the book (see sketch of Abraham Pietersen Van Deursen); from them to learn that Haarlem was his native place, and gives us a definite starting point to work from in the future.

As I had still two or three weeks at my disposal before the time set for my return to America, I determined to spend them in seeing what I could of Belgium and France, returning home by way of Paris and London. From 's Hertogenbosch I therefore took train on Thursday, September 12, for Rosendaal, stopping off on my way thither at Bergen-op-Zoon to see the Archivist there, to whom I had been recommended at 's Hertogenbosch, and with whom I made arrangements for searching records and to write me at Washington. At Rosendaal I bade farewell to Holland, well pleased with my visit, and without an adverse criticism to pass upon it, reaching my European starting point, Antwerp, on the morning of September 13. From thence I made my way to Brussels, finding myself in a country of very different aspect from the flatlands of Holland. Here I made my headquarters for several days, making short excursions to places of interest in the vicinity each day; among other places spending a day at Ostend and noting the difference between the European and American seaside resort. I was much amused at seeing the funny little bathing machines, each drawn by a horse into the water, where the bather is left to his own devices for a certain length of time, when the driver returns for the machine; or, if he desires to return before, he waves a towel out of the tiny porthole at the back of the machine by way of a signal. A magnificent walk, or boulevard, paved with terra cotta bricks, extends for miles along the edge of the water. It is twenty-five feet in height and from sixteen to thirty-five yards in width, and is far superior to any board walk which I have seen in America. In the season this is thronged all day with promenaders and people resting on the long settees, which are placed at intervals along the walk, and where one may enjoy at leisure the lovely scene of the white wings of the sailing vessels and numerous steamers to be seen in every direction on the water.

While at Brussels I visited the battle field of Waterloo, in which, as a soldier, I took especial interest, and got a very good idea of the great battle from the guide, Sergeant Major J. H. Welch of the 10th Royal Hussars, who had served twenty-four years in that regiment and had been guide on the field of Waterloo for thirteen years. I lingered here, going over the scenes of that tragic day, and walking many miles to the various points of interest on the field, and then returning to Brussels.

I reached Paris on September 20, spending a whole week there seeing a few of the many historical places of interest which one can but get a glimpse of in such a flying visit, and of which the memory can retain but the merest outlines.

London was reached on September 27, and another week was spent in seeing that metropolis and then I turned my steps really homewards, sailing from Dover on the steamer Finland October 5. Reaching New York on the evening of October 14, I was just in time to catch a train for Washington, where I arrived about midnight, well satisfied with my jaunt and well pleased to be at home, sweet home, once more.

WILLEM van DEURSEN, son of Hendrick Willem van Deursen and Adriana Greet Welten, was born in Boekel, North Brabant, about 1818, and died at Rosendaal November 19, 1891; he married ANNA MARIA VEKEMANS. During the latter part of his life he lived at Rosendaal, where he was engaged as a Customs officer. On January 30, 1851, he was living at the village of Vierlingsbeek, when the steeple of the Roman Catholic church was seen to be on fire and in danger of falling on the straw roofs of the cottages below. The villagers stood appalled and helpless, unable to reach the fire with water, when Willem van Deursen seized a saw and bravely climbed the burning structure. By his heroic efforts the steeple fell upon a spot where there were no houses, and thus the village was saved from destruction. For this brave deed he was rewarded by the gift of a silver medal from King William III, also one from the lord mayor of the village. The author had the pleasure of seeing these medals when he visited Rosendaal and stayed at the hotel of Willem's son, Karel Ludovicus van Deursen, at that place.

ABRAHAM PIETERSEN
THE
IMMIGRANT ANCESTOR

ABRAHAM PIETERSEN

The Immigrant Ancestor of the Van Deursen Family in the United States and Canada

It is not too much to say that many, many thousands of native born Americans and Canadians of the present day are either directly or collaterally related to the founder of the Van Deursen family in America. Besides the large number who bear the name in all the various ways of spelling it, is the still greater number who bear other names, and trace their lineage back to the Founder through female and collateral lines. It is, therefore, neither a trivial nor uninteresting work to trace out a genealogy of this numerous family, and the compiler of this present work has spent about twenty years of his life in doing so; counting his labor as far from lost. It has been a labor of love to him. His reward will be in the appreciation of his work by those to whom he now offers it, with the hope that it may kindle in their hearts the same warmth of justifiable pride for those honest, sturdy Dutch burghers, who laid the foundations of their great country. He does not claim perfection for it. The Genealogy has yet to be written in which mistakes are not to be found, and only those who have engaged in such work can appreciate the difficulty of it—the sleepless nights spent in trying to unravel mixed up family connections, or, worse still, to follow up some elusive individual who forms an important link in the family chain, but delights to tantalize the poor genealogist by slipping out of his grasp just as he thinks he has found the longed for clue. But this much he can and does say for his work: it is the result of his own desire, years ago, to know who his forebears were, which led him, necessarily, far beyond that, and, although the conclusions reached by him in the compiling may not be infallible in every instance, they are the result of careful comparison of all available data, and no statement is made without being backed by copies of the original documents, or the data furnished by the living descendants of the various branches. Neither does the compiler claim completeness for his work, as if he had said the last possible word upon this great subject—far from it. On the contrary, he offers it simply as having attained a certain stage of the work, and earnestly desires that someone else may be sufficiently enthused by his effort to come forward and take up the work where he has laid it down; carrying it out to completion. This he hopes to have done by his nephew, Mr. William Albert Van Deusen of Madison, Wis., who is now taking up the subject with the view of acquiring a knowledge of it ere he lays it down, and earnestly desires the cooperation of every Van Deusen descendant to this end, by sending in any corrections or additional data, that they may be filed for future use.

And neither is it a question of mere idle curiosity among his numerous descendants to ask "What manner of man was this Abraham Pietersen, our Ancestor?" seeing that through him were transmitted to his posterity those traits of character which make family characteristics.

We have nothing to guide our judgement in this, beyond the record of the man's life after his arrival in New Amsterdam, which we will endeavor to bring before the reader for this purpose. It would, doubtless, be interesting to trace his early life in Holland, before he came to America, and to know something of his ancestors. But at the present date no extended search has been made in Europe. That remains for the future. That he was a man of character and ability, young though he was when he emigrated, is proven by the fact that he came in an official capacity, that of miller, to the West India Company, and at once took an active part in the commercial and political life of the Colony at New Amsterdam, as will be seen as we proceed.

The exact date of the arrival of Abraham Pietersen in America is not at present known. He was born in Haarlem, Holland, in 1607; his baptism being registered in the Records of the Dutch Reformed church in that city, of which the following is a certified translation:

"November 11, 1607. Parents: Pieter Lucasz of Haarlem, Maria Jans. Child: Abraham." Three other records, from the same Registers of the Reformed Church at Haarlem, give the father's birthplace as Brabant. "Baptized: May 8, 1605. Parents: Pieter Joosten of Helmond in Brabant, Lysbeth Jans. Child: Abraham." "Id. January 23, 1603. Parents: Peter Jans of Woensel in Brabant, Aelthen Fasen. Child: Abraham." "Id. March 2, 1604. Parents: Pieter Dirckes of Helmond in Brabant, Heilken Wouters. Child: Abraham."

The next important step in the life of Abraham Pietersen of which we have record, was his marriage, obtained from the same Registers, and sent by C. J. Gonnet, Archivist at Haarlem, in the following words: "I will not delay to inform you, that yesterday [Feb. 8, 1910], we found in the marriage book of the Reformed Church at Haarlem, the following annotation. 'Inscribed for marriage November 25, 1629. Abraham Pietersen, bachelor, born at Haarlem, dwelling in the Great Forest Street (Groote Hout Straat), with Tryntje Melchiors, Spinster, native of Groningen, dwelling in the Blacksmiths Street (Smedestraat), married December 9, 1629,' in the Groote Kerk, now the Reformed Church at Haarlem. As no children of this couple are mentioned in the baptismal books from 1630 to 1635, it is allowed to suppose, that the young-married, soon after the marriage left for the New World." The original, certified copy of the above translation of the marriage record of Abraham Pietersen and Tryntje Melchiors has been deposited in the Division of Manuscripts, in the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.

It is probable that he emigrated to New Netherland very soon after his marriage. The public records prior to 1638 are lost; the only clue we have to events prior to that date is by mention of them afterwards. Thus we find that Abraham Pietersen was in America as early as 1636, in which year he took possession of the island of Quetenesse, off the coast of Narragansett, for the West India Company. This we learn from later records, when the English were encroaching on the Dutch possessions in the time of Stuyvesant's Governorship. The first record is dated Dec. 30, 1654, in which the English are said to have "encroached Westerly below Cape Cod, on the Dutch limits, absorbing Rhode Island, Block Island, Martin's Vineyard, Sloop's Bay, howbeit possession had been taken thereof, for the Company [West India] in the year 1636 by one Abraham Pieterse of Haerlem, on the Island of Queteurs, situate in front of said bay, and Pequators river," etc. (Colonial History of New York, Holland Documents, Vol. 2, p. 134). And again: "exclusive of the special possession which one Abraham Pietersen, of Haerlem, still living, hath on the Island Quetenesse, in Narricanese Bay, situate near Rhode Island, and again on another island above and about the Pequoit river, still and at this day called by the English themselves 'The Dutchman's Island,'" etc.; dated August 4, 1664 (Peter Stuyvesant to the Directors of the West India Company; Ibid, p. 409). Doubtless, were the records prior to 1638 extant, we should find the name of Abraham Pietersen mentioned frequently in them, as he is in those of a later date.

Whether he came to America under contract with the West India Company as their miller is not known; but he held that position, which was an important and lucrative one in those days, from a very early date, being described in the earliest records as "Abraham Pietersen, Molenaar," or Miller. On April 2, 1658, he obtained permission to erect a watermill on the "Fresh Water," i. e. at the mouth of a stream which ran into the East River near the present James and Cherry streets (Calendar of Dutch MSS., p. 193). This mill he deeded to Jan Cornelissen Cleyn and Ryer Cornelissen Saysbergen on September 8, 1661 (Manual of Common Council, p. 683), having previously sold it, on April 20 of same year, to the first named of the two men (Dutch Records, Holland Society Year Book, 1900, p. 132). He probably carried on this mill as a private enterprise, as, in addition to his position as official miller to the Company (see illustration of watermill in Holland, with description of social status of the miller, in Itinerary of my Journey to Holland, earlier on), Pietersen had also several enterprises of his own on hand; one of which was the manufacture of groats, one of the staple food stuffs of the colony, which, prior to its manufacture by Abraham Pietersen, had to be imported from Holland. When he rented Bouwery No. 6 from Director General Kieft, in 1639, he is mentioned in the lease as "Abraham Pietersen Gorter" (manufacturer of groats). This bouwery was leased by Kieft with two mares, one stallion, three cows, one heifer, and one calf, for the term of twenty years; Pietersen to pay an annual rental of forty-five schepels of rye and ninety pounds of butter; the increase of the cattle to be divided with the Company every four years (Calendar of Dutch MSS., p. 11). This farm had previously been occupied by Wolphert Gerritsen Van Cowenhoven (Ibid. p. 175). On November 29, 1640, he also leased Bouwery No. 5 (Calendar of Dutch MSS., pp. 73, 79), and on March 1, 1642, he disposed of all the grain sown on these two bouwries to Jacob Barends (Ibid. p. 18). It would seem that he had sub-let Bouwery No. 5 to one Hendrick Harmensen, whom he sued November 29, 1640, for the surrender of the farm because Harmensen kept cattle, not his own, upon it, which was against the terms of the lease, imposed for the purpose of obliging farmers to clear the land and extend agriculture, instead of confining themselves chiefly to raising cattle, which was deemed less beneficial to the development of the colony. Harmensen, however, denied doing so, and the parties were reconciled in Court (Ibid. p. 73).

It seems probable that Pietersen had more than one mill, as there is a record, dated August 21, 1663, in which it is mentioned that he had sold his mill to Jan Hendricksen Van Bommel (Records of New Amsterdam, Vol. 4, p. 289). On April 27, 1658, Hendrick Van Bommel, probably the father of Jan, appeared in Court regarding a debt of 100 guilders which he owed to Abraham Pietersen, for money advanced (Holland Society Year Book, 1900, Dutch Records, p. 164), showing that Abraham Pietersen was a man of means, who could advance loans. This private milling business of Pietersen's was the cause of some friction between him and Gysbert Opdyck, Commissary for the West India Company, regarding the right of priority of the Company to have its grain ground; the miller maintaining that "first come, first served," was his right. During the heat of the controversy, Opdyck unjustly accused Pietersen of having purloined some of the Company's grain; whereupon the indignant miller immediately took the case before the Court. Opdyck was unable to prove his accusation, and the case was settled out of Court, Opdyck, however, gaining his point in so far that Pietersen was ordered "in future wind and weather permitting to grind the Company's grain before that of private persons" (Calendar of Dutch MSS., p. 99). This was during Pietersen's first contract with the West India Company, the case being before the Court on January 25 and February 2, 1646. The Commissary was, at the same time, ordered to weigh the grain on sending it to and receiving it from the mill. After the expiration of his first contract with the Company, Pietersen was reappointed as miller on August 23, 1648 (Ibid, p. 120), which was probably his last term as official miller, as we have no further record of him as such.

In those days most millers and ferrymen throughout the new settlements were also innkeepers, and the explanation in regard to millers is not far to seek. Farmers and country people living long distances from the mill usually preferred, when they brought their grain to be ground, to wait for their flour, if possible. The roads were poor, and the distances often very long, so that they would gain time by waiting, rather than make the journey twice. They would generally bring their lunch with them, but they required some beverage to drink with it, and as beer was the customary accompaniment to meals at that time, coffee and tea not having yet been generally introduced and expensive, the miller was naturally expected by his waiting customers to provide them with beer. This he could not sell without a permit, therefore he was obliged to take out a tapster's license. If the miller's house was accessibly located, other wayfarers naturally patronized his place; and thus, in course of time, that which had been begun for the accomodation of his waiting customers became an established business. In this way, Abraham Pietersen also became an innkeeper, and on March 16, 1648, was one of the twelve tavern keepers of New Amsterdam who promised "as true men" to observe, as far as laid in their power, all the regulations in regard to tapping then in force at New Amsterdam (Records of New Amsterdam, Vol. 1, p. 8). On July 23, 1648, the tavern of Abraham Pietersen was closed by the Court, on account of the killing there of a man named Clomp by Johannes Roodenborch, who was acquitted by the Court on October 6, 1648 (Calendar of Dutch MSS., pp. 119, 121). This record may not, however, refer to the tavern of Abraham Pietersen the miller. There was another Abraham Pietersen Corbyn, a discharged soldier of the West India Company, who was living at New Amsterdam at this time, and who was a very unruly character, frequently before the Court for selling rum to the Indians and fighting and disorderly proceedings in his house, and who was threatened with banishment for theft (see Records of New Amsterdam). That Abraham Pietersen the miller conducted his business in a law abiding manner, "as a true man," is evident from the fact that he was never before the Court in reference thereto.

From various entries in the public records it is also evident that, like most of New Amsterdam's business men, Abraham Pietersen was quite extensively engaged in real estate transactions. Besides the records which we have of these transactions, it is quite likely he had others, the records of which have been lost, as mentioned previously, or, perhaps, never recorded; the records which remain to us showing that they were kept very irregularly. A case in point, which is the only evidence we have that Abraham Pietersen owned real estate prior to 1649, is the petition, dated December 13, 1649, of Sybout Claesen to the States General at the Hague, stating that "The petitioner having purchased a place from Abraham Pieterse when Stuyvesant understood that he the petitioner was to be the owner thereof, he, Stuyvesant, so diminished and encroached on said lot, that the petitioner was obliged to sell it at a loss of one-half" (Documentary History of New York, Vol. 1, p. 329). Another instance is the record, dated August 2, 1649, of the deeding by Abraham Pietersen to Hendrick Egbertsen of a lot situated to the north east of the bastion of Fort Amsterdam (Calendar of Dutch MSS., p. 147.)

The records of his acquisition of both these properties are missing; how many more are likewise?

Then, also, he owned property on the bank of the East River, at the mouth of the "Fresh Water," upon which he built his watermill, for the erection of which he obtained a permit from Director General Stuyvesant, previously mentioned; also the property on which stood the windmill or horsemill (for the erection of which he needed no official permit, as it was not built upon a public stream), which he sold in 1663 to Jan Van Bommel. The records about this transaction are not clear. A mill was sold to Van Bommel in which the names of Abraham Pietersen and Sybout Claesen appear; but whether the sale was by Claesen or Pietersen is not plain. Pietersen may have previously sold it to Claesen, with whom he had some dealings about that time, and Claesen sold it to Van Bommel, but the language of the records is obscure.

Besides these properties Pietersen purchased from Richard Bridnell on March 19, 1653, a tract of land at Mespachtes Kill, on Long Island. This purchase, however, was annulled by mutual consent on March 28, following (Holland Society Year Book, 1900, pp. 169, 170). On October 15, 1653, he bought at public auction two houses situated on the Broadway, Manhattan (Calendar of Dutch MSS., p. 379). He may have owned another house on the Broadway, as on April 19, 1665, he was taxed 1 guilder weekly towards the maintenance of the British troops, at which time he is described as living "on the Heere Straat New York" (Records of New Amsterdam, Vol. 5, p. 221).

It was customary in those days for business men to invest in real estate for the sole purpose of having ready means of transacting other business. It served as a sort of bank account when banks were unknown and coin very scarce. Thus we find Abraham Pietersen mortgaging some of his property on various occasions, when a favorable opportunity presented itself to buy cheaply, which called for more cash than the enterprising miller had on hand. This was the case when, on April 20, 1656, he purchased from Captain Francois Fyn a herd of cattle, upon which there remained a balance of four hundred guilders. For this amount Pietersen mortgaged to Fyn his house and lot on the Great Heerewegh (Broadway) (Holland Society Year Book, 1900, p. 160). When, on December 3, 1657, he needed money for another commercial transaction, he applied to Borgomaster Oloff Stevens Van Courtlandt for a loan of five hundred guilders; for which amount he mortgaged his second house and lot, on the west side of the Broadway (Ibid, p. 163). That his credit was good and his note considered as good as a mortgage, is shown by the fact that at the death of Johannes De Hulter he owed the estate three hundred and fifty guilders, at 10% interest, for which he had signed a promissory note, and for the use of which money he had paid interest, amounting to thirty-five guilders, on September 3, 1659 (Minutes of the Orphan's Court, New Amsterdam, p. 106, 107). There is no record of the loan, we know of it only through the administration of De Hulter's estate by the Orphans' Court.

That he might carry on his business transactions with more freedom, Pietersen took out papers as a Small Burgher of New Amsterdam on April 14, 1657 (Records of New Amsterdam, Vol. 7, p. 152). Small Burghers were entitled to freedom of trade and the privilege of being received into their respective Guilds; it also secured them exemption from toll and from being sued by a fellow burgher, except in their own burgh; they could not be imprisoned without bail, nor tried for any offense after the lapse of one year. For this right the applicant had to pay twenty-five guilders. Many of the earliest of the inhabitants of New Amsterdam considered themselves entitled to this without being made to pay for it, Pietersen among the number; but the city authorities thought differently, and on September 11, 1663, Pietersen's name is on the Court minutes as not yet having paid his fee (Records of New Amsterdam, Vol. 4, p. 300).

Attacks by the hostile Indians on the little colony were not infrequent, and as a protection against their incursions a wall had been erected across the lower end of the Island of Manhattan, with a bastion, or gateway and tower, at the Broadway, and another at the other end on the bank of the East River. This wall ran along the line of the present Wall Street, which derives its name from this fact. From time to time the wall would become dilapidated at some point, and need repair. This was the case in September, 1655, after a surprise by the Indians, when it was found necessary to strengthen the wall. For this purpose Abraham Pietersen voluntarily subscribed six guilders towards the repairs (Ibid, p. 370). Another record states that he was assessed three guilders for this purpose (Valentine's History of New York, p. 316). His subscription of six guilders was accepted by the authorities, however, and may indicate that he may have been a loser by the late incursion, and was not, at this time, in such prosperous circumstances; his property being the third lot south of Wall Street, opposite Trinity Church, and it was there he was living at the time he was assessed for maintaining the English soldiers in 1665. We have this location verified by a deed, dated Dec. 20-30, 1664, in which it is stated that Pieter Stoutenburgh sold a house and lot to Tomas Major, "situate on the Eastside of the Heere Straat [Broadway] bounded North by the house and lot of Abraham Pietersen Molenaar [Miller], south by the lot of Jan Jansen Brestec" etc. (Minutes of the Orphan Masters of New Amsterdam, Vol. 2, p. 4).

That Abraham Pietersen held the confidence and respect of the community in which he lived, and was a man of affairs in that community, is shown by the fact that he was chosen at a meeting of the representative men of Fort Amsterdam as one of twelve men who were to be a sort of advisory board to the Government. The meeting had been convoked by Director Kieft on August 29, 1641, following the murder of Claes Cornelissen Swits, the wheelwright, in his lonely dwelling on Turtle Bay, on the East River, by a young Weckquaesgeek (Westchester Co.) Indian; and many other depredations by the Indians which had excited the people to such a pitch that retaliatory, as well as protective, measures were demanded from the government. This election of the historic "Twelve Men" was the first attempt at representative government in the Colony, and for him to have been a member of such a body is no mean honor to the descendants of Abraham Pietersen.

But the Twelve Men were not satisfied with simply advising the Director General in regard to measures to be taken against the Indians. As representatives of the people they desired a voice in the conduct of public affairs, and endeavored to influence the actions of the government. This, however, Director Kieft was neither empowered by his superiors in Holland, nor personally inclined to allow, and as a result, on February 18, 1642, the Board of Twelve Men was dissolved.

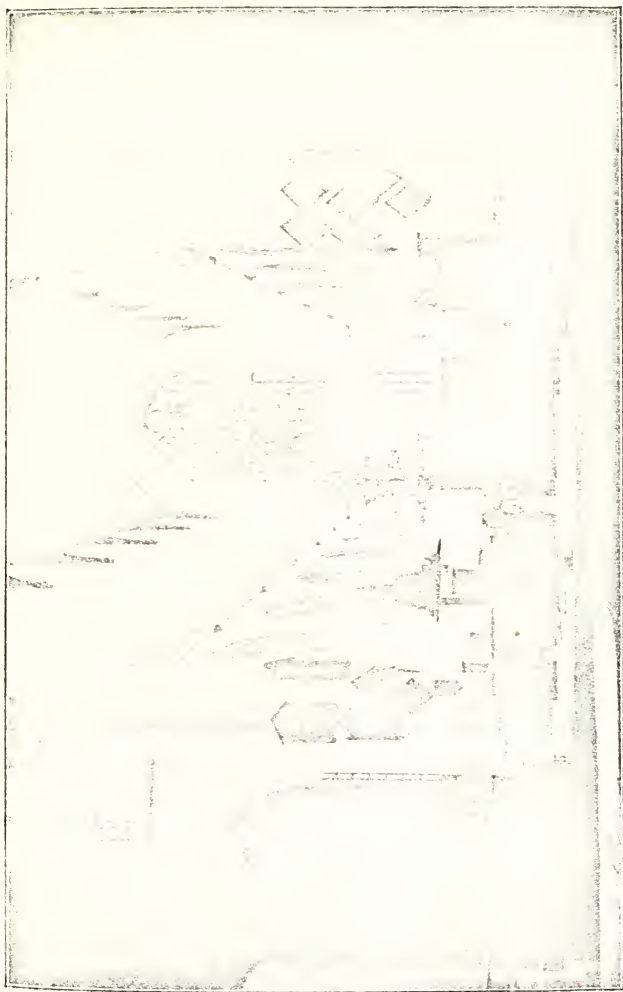

Circumstances, however, principally the ruinous Indian war which was then devastating the country around New Amsterdam, again forced the government to call a meeting of its principal burghers in the Fort. Again the government advised the election of a number of popular representatives to advise and assist the authorities in regard to the conduct of the war. Again the forty-eight representative men, who had previously met in the Fort, were ready to aid the Director General and Council by means of their chosen delegates. This time, however, instead of electing their delegates, they desired the government to make the appointment, while they, the electors, would reject whoever was not agreeable to them. Eight men were selected by the government, one of whom, again, was "Abraham Pietersen, Molenaer." The people, early in September, 1642, ratified the government's choice, but the Board of Eight Men themselves, on September 15, rejected one of their number, Jan Jansen Damen, who was specially accused of having brought about the disastrous Indian war, and of having "signed a certain request in the name of the community" (Documentary History of New York, Vol. 13, p. 16).

The Board of Eight Men was in existence for four years, from September, 1643, to September, 1647; most of the time in violent opposition to the government. This fact may account for only two of its members being appointed to the Board of Nine Men, which succeeded to the dissolved Board of Eight Men on September 25, 1647.

It was while he was a member of the Board of Eight that Pietersen haled Sybout Claesen and his wife to Court for slandering him. These cases of slander were not infrequent among the burghers of New Amsterdam, and Abraham Pietersen did not escape them; but with the same consciousness of integrity with which he afterwards brought Commissary Opdyck before the Court, he was not afraid to have this accusation made public. After the matter had been thoroughly sifted by the Court on March 21, 1645, Claesen and his wife were obliged to retract their slander, and to openly declare that "they know nothing but what is good and honorable of the plaintiff" (Calendar of Dutch MSS., p. 93).

Although Abraham Pietersen was not one of the ninety-four signers of the petition to Director General Stuyvesant, dated September 5, 1664, advising him to surrender New Amsterdam to the English, he was one of those who, on October 21 and following days, took the oath of allegiance to Charles II (Ibid, Vol. 3, p. 76). They had bravely defended their rights, but when they saw it was a hopeless struggle, they wisely submitted to the inevitable and became as loyal subjects to the British king as they had been to their own loved Fatherland. Their interests were too deeply rooted in the country of their adoption to permit of returning to Holland. To have done so would have meant to lose their all, acquired by hard work and many privations; and to begin life anew in the crowded homeland from which they had but recently come. Stuyvesant himself, after a brief visit to Holland in 1665, returned to New York and passed the remainder of his life on his farm "the Bouwery," situated some distance outside of the city, on the country road which led up the east side of the island out onto the Post Road to Boston; known to later generations as the Bowery, of well known reputation. These sturdy Dutch burghers formed the stable foundation upon which was built the solid structure of this great Republic, and their descendants may well feel pride in them.

And Abraham Pietersen was not more commendable as a citizen than he was as a parent; the city records bearing silent testimony to his tender care for his family. He had apprenticed his son, Pieter, with Claes Tysen the cooper, to learn the trade; but Tysen beat the boy so severely that Pietersen petitioned the Court on October 18, 1661, to release the boy. This the Court could not do, after considering the case; but the proceedings had the desired effect upon Tysen of making him treat the boy as he should, which was all the father sought (Records of New Amsterdam, Vol. 1. p. 386). His daughter, Marytje, was the wife of Thomas Jansen Mingael, who died early, leaving a family of five small children to be provided for, and his estate in a very precarious condition. On December 4, 1662, Abraham Pietersen was made guardian of these children, and endeavoured to save the estate of their father from insolvency, but without effect. On February 14, 1663, the widow and her father abandoned the estate, which included a yacht named The Flower of Gelder, and the Orphans' Court appointed administrators. On February 23, 1663, Abraham Pietersen offered to buy in the goods at the price they were valued at, to be paid for in May (Records of New Amsterdam, Vol. 14, pp. 176-203; Minutes of the Orphanmasters).

He and his wife, Tryntje Melchiors, are found inscribed in the register of membership of the Reformed Dutch Church of New York in 1649; they are entered as "Oude Ledematen" (old members), but as this was simply a copy from the earlier membership records, it is impossible to tell just when they joined the church, or how; whether by confession of faith or by letter from the church in Holland. If the original church record had been preserved it might have positively established the time of their coming to New Amsterdam.

And it is in this same old church register that we last meet this doughty pioneer of New Netherland. In the baptismal records it is stated that he was a witness at the baptism of Annetie, the daughter of his son, Pieter Abrahamszen Van Duersen, and of Hester Webbers, Pieter's wife, on July 10, 1667. Thereafter his name disappears from the records, and it is probable that he closed his well spent life about this time, although comparatively a young man.

We know nothing whatever about his wife, Tryntje Melchiors, or Melcherts. That the records contain no mention of her other than as a wife and mother, is a good report. She evidently went quietly about her duties, keeping out of trouble and bringing up her children to be useful members of the community, in which she was aided, doubtless, by the father's good example. She was still alive on December 18, 1678, when she was a witness at the baptism of her granddaughter, Tryntie, named for her, the child of her son, Pieter, and Hester Webbers. This is the last mention of her in the public records, from which we infer that she died about this time, as she would be then at least seventy years of age; the worthy ancestress of so large a family. From her marriage record at Haarlem we learn that she was a native of Groningen, the earliest church records of which town date only from 1640.

It will have been noticed that in all these records there has been no mention of the surname "Van Deursen." Deursen is a place name; the family originating in Deursen, Brabant, one of the provinces of the Netherlands, and, as was customary among the Dutch, took their surname from the place of their birth. It was, however, a matter of individual choice whether the surname was used or not, and this has been the aggravation of all Dutch genealogists and students of early American history. Some members of the same family would use the surname, while others were known simply by their patronymic, or father's name. This latter was the case with Abraham Pietersen; he was Abraham, son of Pieter; sen, se, sz, and s, terminating a name, meaning "son of." "Van" means from, or of, and has no particular meaning apart from this; although some, erroneously, think it is a mark of nobility, as is the case with "von" in Germany. Thus, Abraham Pietersen Van Deursen means Abraham, son of Pieter, from Deursen. He did not use his surname, nor did any of the family until 1667, when Pieter Abrahamszen Van Deursen is so designated in the baptismal record of one of his children. The general use of the surname by the English people who settled in America, doubtless had its influence in causing the habit to become more general with the Dutch among whom they lived. After 1667 we find the name used by all the members of Abraham Pietersen's family habitually; although the spelling of it becomes various as the years pass on and members of the family remove to other parts of the country.

Thus we have Van Deursen, Van Deusen, Van Dusen, Van Duse, Van Duzer, Van Duzen, Van Doozer, and Van Dozen. Some unite the two words into Vandusen, while others have dropped the Van altogether. A few have retained the original Van Deursen, but the general mode has come to be Van Deusen in the United States and Van Dusen in Canada.

From the foregoing record of the life of Abraham Pietersen Van Deursen which we have laid before the reader, it will not be difficult to answer the question with which we started out, viz.: "What manner of man was this Abraham Pietersen, our Ancestor?" That both he and his wife were brave and intrepid is demonstrated by the fact of their leaving the quiet comfort of the Fatherland to face the unknown dangers of the long voyage and still greater perils of Indian massacre in the land of their choice, in addition to the hardships and privations of a pioneer's life. That he was diplomatic and possessed the confidence of the Dutch authorities, is shown by their entrusting him with the delicate task of acquiring land from the Indians, usually entrusted to some official of experience, acquainted with the Indian dialects and characteristics. That he also possessed the confidence of the community, and was a patriotic and public spirited citizen, is shown by the readiness with which he accepted the membership on the Boards of Twelve and Eight Men, at a troublous period of New Netherland history. That he was a man of peace is evident from the entire absence in the records that he ever molested anybody; although he was not slow to fight his slanderers in open Court, always coming out victorious. Conscientious in all his relations of life, as a citizen, a representative of the people, a business man, a husband and a father, his was undeniably one of those monumental careers which put so indelible a stamp upon New York's early history. Peaceable without being timid; enterprising without being unduly speculative; staunch without being self-assertive; sagacious without being sharp; none of his acts inviting palliation; it is certainly a pleasure to know this honest man from among the people, and a privilege to be counted among his descendants. The history of his life is an inspiration to do good, and the thousands of his descendants will profit by following his noble example.

FIRST GENERATION

FIRST GENERATION

1 ABRAHAM PIETERSEN (VAN DEURSEN), the Ancestor, was born in the city of Haarlem, Holland, where he was baptized Nov. 11, 1607, in the Dutch Reformed Church. His intention of marriage was recorded at Haarlem Nov. 25, 1629, at which time he was dwelling on the Groote Houtstraat (Great Forest Street), Haarlem, and a bachelor. He was married on Dec. 9, 1629, to TRYNTJE MELCHIORS, spinster, born in Groningen and dwelling at the Smedestraat (Blacksmith street), Haarlem, (Records of the Groote Kerk, Haarlem).

It is probable that Abraham Pietersen and his wife left Haarlem for America very soon after their marriage, as no baptismal records of any of their children are found at that place between 1630 and 1635, and he is known to have been in New Amsterdam, now New York, in 1636, when he was recorded as "of Haarlem." The baptismal records of the Dutch Reformed Church at New Amsterdam date from 1639, therefore we have no record of the baptisms of the first four children of Abraham Pietersen and Tryntje Melchiors, though, doubtless, they were born in that city. The baptisms of their two youngest sons, Pieter and Melchior, are found on the registers of the church, however. On April 14, 1657, Abraham Pietersen was granted a "Small Burgher Right" (New York Historical Society Collection, Vol. 18, p. 22). Four of his children, viz., Teuwis, Marytje, Jacob and Melchior, settled in Albany, their names, as found in various deeds, being almost invariably spelled Van Deusen, omitting the "r" which appears in their father's name.

Abraham Pietersen lived on the Heerewegh Straat, or Broadway, New Amsterdam, where he carried on the occupation of miller and innkeeper, trading also in land and cattle. The date of his death is not known.

² TEUWIS (MATTHEUS) ABRAHAMSEN (VAN DEURSEN) eldest son of (1) Abraham Pietersen (Van Deursen) and Tryntje Melchiors of New Amsterdam; b a 1631; m 1653, HELENA ROBBERTS.

Teunis Abrahamson Van Duersen early removed to Beverwyck (Albany), where he was granted a lot Oct. 28, 1658. In 1667 he removed to Claverack. Munsell and Talcott both state, however, that he lived at Albany until 1700. On June 26, 1677, he deeded a house and lot to Paulus Martense Van Benthuyzen, the property being afterwards transferred by Van Benthuyzen to Harme Janse Lyndrayer. The following is an extract of the latter deed. "Appeared before me Ro. Livingston, secr &c and in the presence of the Honorable Messieurs Richard Pretty & Andries Teller, commissaries, etc. Paulus Martense Raenmaker (wagon maker) (Van Benthuyzen), who declared that he had in true rights, free ownership, granted conveyed and transferred to and for the behoof of Harme Janse Lyndrayer (ropemaker) in a certain house and lot standing and lying here in Albany, bounded south by Pieter Loockermans, north by the house of Laurens Van Ale & Jan Janse Bleecker, west and east by the public street, in breadth in front on the street (Broadway), which this grantor, does by virtue of the conveyance given him by Mattheus Abrahamse (Van Deusen) of date the 26 of June 1677," etc.

He resided at Albany and Claverack, at which two places his children were probably born, but the baptismal records of Albany do not begin until Aug. 5, 1683, while those of Claverack date only from 1722, hence their names are not found on the records of either place.

Claas Van Elslant was an undertaker of New Amsterdam, who died some time previous to 1677, as is shown by the following interesting records:

"By the honorable, the commissaries of Albany, colony Renselaerswyck and Schaernhectady, etc., whereas Catelyntje Van Elslant, wife of Jacob Abrahamse (Van Deursen), Cuyper (cooper), proposes to depart from here for Holland, to collect and receive there some monies, coming to her and her brother by way of inheritance, and bequest from her late mother's uncle, Harmanus Antonides Vander Linde, in his life time minister at Naerden, to which end she has solicited of us a certificate of testimonial, which we cannot refuse: therefor, we declare that she is a daughter of Claes Van Eslandt (sic), deceased, having been in his life time undertaker (aenspreecker) and gravedigger at New York, and her mother's name Wil- lenstie Harpers Vander Leinde.

"Given under our hands and seals, in Albany, the 25th of September, in the nine and twentieth year of the reign of our sovereign lord Charles the Second, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, defender of the faith, 1677." (This document is a copy without signatures.)

"Appeared before me Robert Livingston, secr., etc., and in presence of the honorable magistrates, Mr. Philip Pieterse Schuyler and Mr. Richard Pretty, etc., Claes Van Eslandt, and Jacob Abrahamse (Van Deusen), citizens of Albany, who declare that they had, in accordances with advices from Harmanus Vander Linde, dwelling in the Hage, in Holland, appointed and empowered Catelyntje Van Eslandt, wife of the aforesaid Jacob Abrahamse (Van Deusen), and sister of the aforesaid Claes Van Eslandt, specially to demand, collect and receive in Holland, etc., her and her aforesaid brother's portion of the inheritance and bequest, left for them by her mother's uncle, named Harmanus Antonides Vander Linde, in his life time minister at Naerden, and acquittance to execute for receipts, and for claims to caveeren (sic), and further, to do, perform and execute all things which may be needful and her judgment may suggest; promising at all times to hold good all that shall be done and performed in the aforesaid matter by their aforesaid sister and wife, as their attorney without any contradiction.

"Done in Albany, in America, on the 25th of September, and in the nine and twentieth year of the reign of our sovereign lord, Charles the Second, by the grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, defender of the faith, Annoque Domini, 1677." (This document is also without signatures.)

In 1686 Jacob Abrahamsen Van Deursen was one of the auditors of the yearly accounts of the Dutch Reformed Church at Albany, and in 1687 we find him also in office there, his son, Harpert, being also on the consistory the same year. On June 20, 1678, he conveyed to Jan Cornelise Vyselaer, alias Gow, "a certain lot standing and lying here in Albany; bounded on the South and West by Jochem Ketelheyn's; on the North by the house of the said Jan Gow; on the East by the public street, being the same premises hereto conveyed to him by patent under the hand and seal of the late governor-general, Richard Nicholls, of date the 22d of May, 1667," etc.

Upon the arrival of Dominie Godefridus Dellius as assistant to the old Dominie Schaets, the Commissaries called together the congregation of the church to "enquire of them in a friendly manner how much they will from their own Liberality and good inclination contribute to the maintenance of the said Dom. Godefridus Dellius." Among those who contributed for the term of one year were: "Jacob Abrahamse (Van Deursen) £ 2., Melgert Abrahamse (Van Deusen), yeoman, from below the North Gate" (amount not stated). In 1671 he was a resident of Schotack (Schodack, Renss. Co., N. Y.), where he was a farmer. In September, 1689, he was enrolled as a yeoman in Capt. Marten Gerritse's Company, and subscribed "for ye Raiseing of some men for ye Defence of this County against ye french."

The following mortgage was given upon certain property, part of which belonged to Melchert Abrahamse Van Deusen, which was pledged as security for a sum owing on a bail bond.

"Appeared before me, Ludovicus Cobes, Secretary of Albany, New Amsterdam, &c., in presence of the Hon. Heeren commissaries, &c, Philip Pieterse Schyler and Jan Hendrickse Van Bael, Eldert Gerbertse Cruiff, who acknowledged that he is well and honestly indebted to and in arrears to Messieurs Jan Hendrick Bruyns and Hans Hendrickse, in the net sum of three hundred and fifty francs in beavers and forty eight francs in seewant, together with seventy-five boards, growing out of a matter of security, as principals bound for said Cruiff, in consequence of a certian sentence dated the 5th of January, 1670, which aforesaid money the subscriber promises to pay to said Jan Hendrick Bruyns and Hans Hendrickse punctually in the time of six weeks without longer delay, therefore pledging especially his distilling kettle, worm and dome, the sawmill at Bethlehem and all his lands in Catskil, together with all his title to his house, brewery in a lot lying here in Albany, likewise two cows here and four cattle, with Gerrit Theunisse (Van Vechten) two cattle with Melgert Abrahamse (Van Deusen) at Schotack, three head of cattle with Jan Helmerse (alias de Boek), half of which is coming to him and three heifers with Hendrick Maerson and a bull; furthermore generally his person and estate, personal and real, present and future, nothing excepted, putting the same in subjection to all the lord's laws and judges for the recovery of said payment in due time if need be without loss or cost.

"Done in Albany the 21st of June, 1671

"Philip Pieterse

"Jan Hend: Van Bael

"Acknowledged before me

"Eldert Gerbertse Cruiff.

"Ludovicus Cobes, Secretary."

16 CATALYNTJE (MATTHEUS) VAN DEURSEN, dau of (2) Teuwis (Mattheus) Abrahamsen Van Deursen and Helena Robberts of Albany and Claverack, N. Y.; b a 1678, at Claverack; m (1st) at Claverack, Dec. 5, 1699, JACOBUS MARTENS VAN YSELSTYN, b at Claverack and residing at Kingston. He was the son of Cornelis Martensen Esselsteen and Cornelia Van den Berg (Calendar of Wills 578, p. 135) and the grandson of Marten Cornelisz Van Ysselsteyn and Mayke Cornelis.

Marten Cornelisz van Ysselsteyn, the ancestor of the family of this name, was one of the proprietors of land at Schenectady in 1663, and later, was one of the settlers of Claverack. In an affidavit of Oct. 28, 1660 (Notarial Papers, 1: 36, Albany County Clerk's Office), he states that in his youth he had lived for many years at Houten, in the Bishopric of Utrecht (Van Rensselaer Bowier Manuscripts, p. 181). He has been confused by Pearson, and other writers, with Cornelis Maeson, the second son of Cornelis Maessen (See Miscellaneous and Related Families) and Catelintie Martensz, who came from Bueren Maessen, in Gelderland, the ancestor of the Van Buren family.

At the death of Jacobus Van Yselsteyn, Catelyntje Van Deursen m (2d) at Livingston, May 16, 1718, LAMBERT KOOL, bp Dec. 7, 1684, son of Cornelis Teunsen Cool, q. v. In 1696 Catalyntje Van Deursen was a member of the Dutch Church at Albany (Holland Soc. Year Book, 1904, p. 19). Administration granted her May 31, 1736 (Lib. 12, p. 198; Ulster Co. Probate Records, p. 124).

Towards the close of the year 1683, William Van Deusen was accepted as a member of the Dutch Church at Albany, and in 1720 we find him an Elder there. On Jan. 24, 1699, he took the oath of allegiance to the British and was a member of "Capt. Johannis Mingaels Comp. ye 10 oc'ber 1715, City of Albany." He was also an active participator in the political life of the colony, being chosen Assessor for the Third Ward of Albany Oct. 14, 1703. His name is mentioned frequently in the Colonial Records of the time. He acted in the capacity of firemaster, as the following record shows. "Dec.

7, 1706, The Council resolved to appoint the following persons as fyremasters for ye Ensueing year until the 10th of October next. William Hogan Anthony Coster, William Jacobsz (Van Deusen), Johs. Claes, Jan Evertse & Jacobus Schuyler, who are to vew the Chimneys, where fyres are kept within the city and oyer convenient places once in each 14 nights and where they find chimneys extraordinary fould to fine ye owner in ye summe of three shillings." (Van Deusen Genealogy, p. 40). His house stood on the north corner of Maiden Lane and Pearl Street, Albany, in 1711. He was buried at Albany Sept. 8, 1737.

22 HARPert (JACOBSZ) VAN DEUSEN, son of (5) Jacob Abrahamsen Van Deusen and Catalyntje Van Elslant; bp in N. A. Oct. 9, 1665; m at Albany Jan. 24, 1695, MARRYTJE GERRITSE LANSING, dau of Gerrit Ryertse Lansing and Ariantje Janse. In 1683 he was a member of the Dutch church at Albany, and in 1701 we find his name on the records of that church as Deacon. In 1728 he paid 2 florins to the church as "dood cleet gelt" or pall money. On Sept. 29, 1708, he was elected an Alderman of the Second Ward, Albany, assuming office on Oct. 14. In 1715 he is recorded as a member of Captain Gerrit Rosenboom's Company of Militia, and was a freeholder of the Third Ward in 1720. He was buried at the foot of State Street July 6, 1742, and his wife on March 9, 1750.

Harpert Jacobsz Van Deusen, in common with many other members of the family, was prominent in the public affairs of the colony at Albany. The following records are not only of interest to the family, but throw a light upon the manners and habits of living in those early pioneer days, not so very far removed from our own, when the nation, with rapid, giant strides, has taken a foremost place among the nations of the world, unprecedented among them for the rapidity of its growth, and owing its preeminence, may we not say, to the solid characteristics of those early pioneers who laid its foundations.

"Whereas on the 24th of May last a warrant was directed to the assessors of this City to make their assessment for £100 upon the Inhabitants therein, and to make their return in the space of eight days to Mr. Mayor, under hand and seal, which assessment being made and produced at the meeting, 'desyring approbation,' but being found not to be sealed according to order 'is given over again to ye assessors and referred till Harpert Jacobse (Van Deusen) Ben. van Corlaer, assessors, come home from New York, to the sealing thereof.'"

"Albany, ye 14th of October, A^o 1700. At the day appointed by the Charter of the City for the Aldermen in their respective wards to make return of the aldermen, assistants, assessors and constables 'for ye ensueing year,' Harpert Jacobse (Van Deusen) was returned, as assistant 'from the 'Third Ward.'"

"At a Council meeting held on the 15th of November, 1700, at which were present: John Johnson Bleeker, Mayor; Joh. Schuyler, Da. Schuyler, Johannes Roseboom, John Cuyler, Wessel ten Broek, Joh. Abeel, aldermen; Jacob Turke, Hend. Oothout, Luykas Gerritse, Gerrit Van Ness, Harpert Jacobse (Van Deusen) assistants.

"It is concluded that the following Proclamation be proclaimed, That according to ye yearly custome they doe hereby prohibit and forbid ye Retailing of all sorts of strong Liquor within this Citty and County, unless by Mr. Mayors Lycense, on penalty of forfeiting as a fyne upon such person or persons so offending ye summe of five pounds according to act of assembly, as also that no such Retailers shall receive from any Souldier upon any Pretence whatsoever any of their Provisions, Cloaths, or other accoutrements, or shall retaile to them in their house after ye ringing of ye Bell for Eight o'clock at night upon penalty of forfeiting for each souldier so founde as aforesaid ye summe of six shillings for ye Behoffe of such Person as shall sue for ye Same."

"At a meeting of the commonality held on the 24th of November, 1700, it was among other things concluded that warning be given to the Justices of the City and County to appear on the 23d of December at nine o'clock in the morning to feew (view) the City and County's accounts, for the late year to the 14th October last. To which end Johannis Abeel, John Schuyler, and Johannis Roseboom, aldermen, Jacobus Turke, Luykas Gerritse, and Harpert Jacobse (Van Deusen), assistants, are appointed to 'vizite' said accounts and see them justly made, returning them in the hands of Mr. Mayor the 21st of December next."

"The Council of the 27th of January, 1701, concluded and thought very necessary that fyre leathers and hooks be made for ye behooffe of this Citty, since ye old one Deckayed and lost. Wherefore it was resolved that three leathers of five and twenty, and three of eighteen foot be made, and three hooks of fifteen foot, which Hend. Oothout and Harpert Jacobse (Van Deusen) have undertaken to make with all speed.

It is further concluded since the bridge by Col. Schuyler doth decay, that Mr. Roseboom, Hend. Oothout, and Harpert Jacobse (Van Deusen) to 'vizite ye same and make returns' the next Court what is required to be repaired. On the following day, ye Gen'n yesterday appointed to vizite ye same doe Returne that it Requires to be Repaired with 1 oak logg of 17 foot, &c. It is Resolved that the gutters next to the house of Mr. Cuyler near the fort, and the creek by the Lutheran Church, require before they can be repaired, one 'pine logg of thirty foot long, and one to a half foot thick, at ye small end, one of five and twenty foot, like thickness,' &c., all of which timber wood, as aforementioned, Mr. Joh. Cuyler, alderman, Harpert Jacobse (Van Deusen) and Hend. Oothout, assistants, have undertaken to agree with some 'Particular person who shall Ride ye same upon ye Citty charge.' "

"On May 6, 1701, Mr. Joh. Lydius, Minister, Anthony van Schaik, Elder, and Harpert Jacobse (Van Deusen) Dayken of ye Dutch Reformed Church of Albany, make application to the Commonality against Pr. Bogardus that he is about enfencing a certain lott of gronde Scituate, Lying and being in ye great pasture to ye southwarde of ye Citty, Belonging to ye Church wardens, and in possession to which they own a pretence. Desyreing ye Gen'n in Common Council to be aiding and assisting them in ye premises that ye further in-fencing may be stopt till ye arrival of Maj. Dirk Wessels, who is supposed can give some Information relating to said lott. Ye Gen'n in Common Council have taken ye Request in consideration and sent for Mr. Bogardus desyreing him to forbear fencing four or five days till Maj. Wessells arrives, but fyndeing unwilling to allow of sd Days, are unanimously of opinion that sd lott of gronde shall be no further Infenced till next Saturday, on the arrival of Dirk Wessells, who Emmediately shall be sent for."

"On July 31, 1701, the Release or Conveyance of the Church at Albany (which, on the 1st instant was appointed to be drawn) is produced. The same after being perused is signed, sealed and delivered by John Johnson Blecker, Esq., Mayor of this City, by and with advise and consent of the aldermen and Common Council, to Mr. Joh. Lydius, Minister of the Gospel of the Reformed Netherland Dutch Congregation of the City of Albany, Maj. Dirk Wessels, Anthony van Schack, Hend. v. Rensselaer, and Johannis Abeel, present Elders, and William Clase Groesbeck, Harpert Jacobse (Van Deusen), Gerrit Van Ness, & Johannis Schuyler, present Dyakens of ye sd Congregation and their successors forever."

"Harpert Jacobse was again chosen assistant, from the Third Ward, and Ruth Melgertse was chosen High Constable, for ye Half Moon, Oct 14, 1701."

"On the 11th Instant the Council concluded that the following persons, viz: Johannis Abeel, Johannis Roseboom, aldermen, Johannis Harmense, and Harpert Jacobse (Van Deusen) assistants, be appointed to vew ye stockadoes lately bought by Tierk Harmense, &c., whether ye same be sufficient and according to agreement, and to make returne of ye same unto Mr. Mayor in ye space of three time twenty four houres ensueing ye date hereof."

"The Mayor, Aldermen and Commonality met in Council on the 25th of November, 1701, and passed the following resolution: Whereas Complaints are made yt diverse Inhabitants doe refuse to pay such summe or summes of money they are indebted to the 2 pr ct upon Indian goods, and 3d, upon each gallon Rom graunted by act of assembly to the City of Albany and County to defray their necessary [expenses], which goods and Rom being landed and received in their houses before the Determination of said act, which expired 1st July last. The Mayor, Aldermen and Commonality, after viewing of said act, take it into consideration that such Person or Persons must pay the money so indebted and thereto ordered the City Treasurer to goe rounde and collect the same, and in each case such persones do refuse to pay such debts, if under 40s to summonse them before any Justice, if above 40s to sue for the same at the next Mayor's Court, moreover Jacob Turke and Harpert Jacobse, assistants, are appointed to assist said Treasurer."

"Among the Aldermen, of Albany, chosen on the 14th of October, 1703, were, for the second Ward, William Jacobse, Assessor; for the third Ward, Ruth Melgertse, Assistant; Harpert Jacobse, Assessor."

"The Council ordained on June 19, 1708, that Hendk without ye sworne Surveyor of this Citty Bee authorized together with Barent Sanders and Hend: Ten Eyk, by whose directions the Inhabitants of the Pearl St. within from the house of Mr. Robt Livingston & ye house of Catherine Vander Poel To ye houses of Mr. John Cuyler and Johs harmense each before his house or Lott are make the Regulation & in good order yt gysbert marcelis and harpert Jacobse (Van Deusen) are likewise appointed to be assistant to ye sd Hend without by whose directions ye Inhabts of ye small St. yt goes down in ye Citty from gysbt marselis and abraham Kipp to the house of John D. Wandlaer are Likewise to make Each ye same Regular and in good order before his own house or Lott before the first of Augt next Ensueing."

At the close of the year 1700, Harpert Jacobse Van Deusen was one of the auditors of the accounts of the Reformed Dutch Church at Albany, the following quaint entry being among the expenses of the year. On February 15, Ryseck, widow of Gerrit Swart, and the last of the church poor, died, the onkosten (cost) for whose funeral was: "3 dry boards for the coffin, 7: 10; 3-4 nails, 1: 10; making the coffin, 249.; cartage, 103; a half vat and an anker of good beer, 27 g.; 1 gal. rum, 21 g.; 6 gall Madeira for women and men, 84 g.; Sugar and cruyery, 5 g.; 150 sugar cakes, 15 g.; tobacco and pipes, 4: 10; Hendrick Roseboom, doodgraver, 30 g.; use of the pall, 12 g.; total, 230 g. A claim of Roseboom of 12 g. for inviting to the funeral (prelendeerde voor't aenspreken buyten d' stad) was paid; but was regarded as an extortionate charge, and the consistory ordered that the doodgraver should thereafter have from the deacons 30 guilders and no more, for like services."

Evert Pels, father of the husband of Margareta Van Deusen, was from Statijn, or Steltijn (Stettin, Pomerania); and was engaged as a brewer for the term of six years, June 5, 1642. He sailed for America the same month and year "by den Houttuyn" with his wife and servant. Feb. 28, 1647, he leased the farm formerly occupied by Symon Walischsz, on Papscaene Island, for six years, at 500 f. per year; but after building a new house and barns transferred the lease to Juriaen Bestval and Jochem Kettelheym on Jan. 14, 1649, releasing the property on March 25, 1649. Nov. 18, 1649, he leased, jointly with Willem Fredericksz (Bout), the farm formerly occupied by Crijn Cornelisz, in Greenbush, for which he is charged in the accounts with an annual rent of 400 f. from May 1, 1649, till 1661, when he moved to the Esopus; the same day they also leased the saw and grist-mill in Greenbush, formerly occupied by Jacob Jansz Flodder, for which he is charged with an annual rent of 125 f. from May 1, 1649, till May 1, 1658 (Van Rensselaer Bowier Manuscripts p. 609, 679 and 828).

He was an overseer in 1667 under Richard Nicolls, Governor of New York (Report 2, State Historian p. 375).

(see Miscellaneous and Related Families); (2d) RACHEL.....

Jan was a member in 1738 of the Foot Company of Militia of Hurley, Ulster Co., under the command of "Cornelius Wine Coop," and a Lieut. in the First Regt., Ulster County Militia, Col. Johannes Snyder, during the Revolution. He was Paymaster of the Third Regt. under Col. John Cantine and Col. Levi Pawling; also Quartermaster, probably under the same commanders. He was Lieut. and Paymaster to Col. Pawling's Regt. of New Levies in 1784. By occupation he was a blacksmith, residing at Hurley, according to his will, which was dated Sept. 17, 1781, and probated Apr. 25, 1801, and in which he mentions wife, Rachel, and three youngest children. The date of his second marriage is not known, nor whether his children were all borne by his first wife, as seems probable from the names of their sponsors.

150 WILLEM VAN DEURSEN, second son of (78) Willem (Abrahams) Van Deursen and Catharina Gilbert; bp July 12, 1752, at New York City; m September 30, 1778, MARTHA NEWTON WHITTELEY, b Sept. 1, 1756; dau of Chauncey Whittelsey and Martha Newton, his second wife (see Miscellaneous and Related Families). She was married by her father, who was then pastor of the First Church in New Haven, Conn.

Captain William Van Deursen was for a number of years in command of vessels bound for foreign ports. January 1, 1781, he was commissioned Captain of a State Company of artillery, appointed for coast duty in Connecticut; which position he resigned August 1, following. October 2, 1781, he was commissioned commander of the brigantine "Middletown" of 200 tons burden, the property of Chauncey Whittlesey & Company, carrying 14 carriage guns and a crew of 30 men. By this commission he was authorized to seize the ships and property of the subjects of Great Britain. The commission was signed by "Thos. M. Kean President of the United States of America in Congress assembled," and countersigned by "Chas. Thomson, Secy" and is a valued heirloom among the family papers. On the back of the commission is an endorsement by Jonathan Trumbull, Governor of Connecticut, of the same date as the commission, which gives Captain Van Deursen's personal description: "28 years of age; 5 feet 9 inches high; blue eyes; light long hair; light complexion and slender set."

January 24, 1815, he was commissioned as Surveyor and Inspector of the Port of Middletown (U. S. Customs), and seems to have held these positions until death, which occurred after a few hour's illness. For a short time after his marriage he resided in New Haven.

In 1786 he purchased property in Middletown on which he built a house and made it his permanent residence. A portion of this property is still (1910) in the possession of the family. He was the recipient of an autographic letter of congratulation from General Washington which is now (1909) in the possession of his granddaughter, Margaret Van Deusen, of Middletown, Conn. He died Dec. 4, 1824, his wife surviving him many years. She was a Revolutionary pensioner (Ctf. No. 22,480) until her death, Dec. 18, 1839.

192 GLOUDE (CLAUDE) VAN DEUSEN, son of (94) Johannes Van Deusen and Christyntyje De La Matre of Claverack, N. Y.; bp at Kinderhook Sept. 6, 1754; m (1st) at Clav. Nov. 8, 1780, ELIZABETH MULLER; (2d) at Palatine, N. Y., Jan. 12, 1791, ANGELICA VAN SLYCKE; b Jan. 16, 1769; d Sept. 17, 1859.

When Gloude Van Deusen was still a very young man, scarcely out of his teens, the long smouldering fire of the American Revolution broke into flame, and, with his father and brothers, John and Cornelis, he cast in his lot with the patriots. He was in active service during the war, serving as private and sergeant. The following extracts are taken from his claim (No. 16,280) for a pension, which was filed Sept. 19, 1832. "GLONDEY VAN DEUSEN, a resident of the town of Palatine, Montgomery Co., N. Y. Born Sept. 27, 1754, in the town of Claverack, co. of Albany, now Columbia, N. Y. Has Bible record of birth [the variation of this date will be noted from above Church Record of his baptism]. When called into service he lived in the said town of Claverack, he lived there after the revolutionary war, and continued to reside there until about 38 years of age, when he removed to said town of Palatine. He was called into the service of the United States in the year 1775, the precise time he does not recollect. He was enrolled in the Company of Militia commanded by Capt. Casparus Coyne, in the regiment when Henry [Lt. Col. Henry J.] Van Rensselaer was Colonel. John Osterhout was his Captain in 1778. He served over two years. In the Fall of 1777, he was in the service under Gen. Schuyler, Gates and Arnold at Fort Edward, Stillwater and places in the vicinity, previous to the surrender of Burgoyne and his army. He was at the decisive battle of Bemis' Heights, and this was the only regular battle in which he was engaged. Never received any written discharge. Stated that he served one year as sergeant and more than one year and six months as a private. Was present at Johnstown about Jan., 1776, and helped take Sir John Johnson and his tenants prisoners of war. That at the time of harvest of the year of the battle of Bemis Heights he got excused and went home and found his sister (Ariaantje) cradling in the harvest field and he returned shortly and was in the battle as before stated. His father, John Van Deusen, formerly called Johannes, was chairman of the Committee of Safety for the town of Claverack during the whole war; that he resided in a large brick house which he used as a fort during that whole war." "July 8, 1833. James Van Deusen resident of Kinderhook, Columbia Co., N. Y., stated that his brother Glondy is older than he, he is 78 on 27 Sept.; that his father was on the Committee and his three older brothers, Glondy, Cornelius and John were out at different times during the whole revolutionary war, deponent remaining at home, being the youngest. Resided during the revolution in the town of Claverack."

The regiment in which Glondy served was the Eighth, Albany County Militia, in which so many of his relatives also served. He died July 18, 1845; bur on his farm near Palatine, N. Y.

193 CORNELIS VAN DEUSEN, son of (94) Johannes Van Deusen and Christyntje De La Matre of Claverack; bp at that place Jan. 8, 1758; m at Coxsackie, N. Y., Dec. 4, 1777, by the Rev. John Schuneman, pastor of the Reformed Dutch Church at Coxsackie, to RACHEL ELTINGE; b in Albany Co., N. Y., a 1759; dau of Lieut. James Eltinge of the Eighth Regt., Albany Co. Militia, Col. Robert Van Rensselaer. After Cornelis Van Deusen's death, she married again Dec. 1, 1799, Abraham Salisbury, who died June 16, 1824.

Cornelis saw much active service during the Revolutionary War. He was Orderly Sergeant in Capt. Casparus Conyne's Company of Col. Robert Van Rensselaer's Eighth Regt.; in which so many of the Van Deusens fought. He was also a member of this same Company when it was commanded by Capt. John Osterhout, and was appointed Ensign Feb. 25, 1778. In the Spring of 1776 he was with the regiment at Johnstown, N. Y., for several months, during which time he assisted at the taking of Sir John Johnson and his tenants as prisoners of war. Later in the same year they were on an expedition up the Hudson River. In the early part of 1777 the regiment was stationed at Fort Edward, subsequently falling back to Fort Miller, and from thence to Stillwater and Saratoga, where they remained all the time Burgoyne's army remained in the vicinity. He took part in the battle of Bemis Heights, just previous to Burgoyne's surrender. From 1779 to 1782 he was stationed for several months of each year along the Hudson and Mohawk Rivers, on scouting expeditions and guard duty in Albany and Dutchess Counties, in pursuit of Tories and Indians, according to the statement of his widow in 1840, when she made application for a pension (No. 17,776). At that time she was eighty-one years of age. He died at Green City, N. Y., Oct. 8, 1787.

201 CONRAD VAN DUSEN, son of (99) Robert Van Deusen and Catharina Van Ham of Albany and Dutchess Counties, N. Y.; b near Dover, Dutchess Co., April 23, 1751; bp at Claverack April 28, 1751; m (1st) Oct. 27 1771 HANNAH KOON or Coon, of Dutchess Co., who was b May 1, 1754, and d at Adolphustown, Upper Canada, March 8, 1791; (2d) July 9, 1791, at Adolphustown, MILLICENT (FERGUSON) HOOVER, dau of Ferguson and widow of Jacob Hoover, whom she married May 19, 1789, and by whom she had one son, Jacob Hoover, Jr., b July 11, 1790. She died April 27, 1829, and was buried beside her husband, Conrad Van Dusen, in the old United Empire Loyalist burying ground at Adolphustown. Her first husband, Jacob Hoover, Sen., met his death by an accident. He was the son of Casper Hoover, a native of Holland, who immigrated to America and settled on the banks of the Susquehannah River in Pennsylvania. From Pennsylvania he removed to Adolphustown, Upper Canada, where he died July, 1786. Jacob Hoover was a Revolutionary soldier and, in September, 1787, filed a claim (No. 866) for property lost.

Conrad Van Dusen was a Loyalist in the struggle for independence in the American Colonies, and for that reason his property in Albany County, N. Y., was sequestered in 1778. "From a report of Messrs. Matthew Adgate, Gabriel Esseltine and Isaac Goes, Commissioners of Sequestration for Southern District of Albany County, New York, dated Feb. 16, 1778, the personal property of 'Col. Vanduersen' Conrad Van Deusen, was sold for £27-18-0" (Comptroller's Office, Albany, N. Y.). His own account of this transaction is related in his claim to the British Government. "Montreal, November 9th 1787. Evidence on the Claim of Conrad Van Dusen, late of Albany County, New York Province. Claimant Sworn. Says he is a native of Duchess County N. York Province. When the War broke out he lived on a Farm Leased forever from Col. Rensellar. He continued to live at home until Feby 1777 when he went to N York. The cause of his leaving home at that time was to release Capt. Mc Alpin of Col. Fanning's Regt., who was taken prisoner Recruiting for the British Army. His life was in danger. Before that time he had trained in the militia but never served. He likewise took an oath, but he does not know the substance of it. Upon his coming to N York he enlisted in Col. Fanning's Regt. & was sent back to recruit. He served in that Regt the whole War. He now resides on Bay of Quinty 4th Township above Catarauqui. Property 139 acres of land on Ranseller's Manor on a lease forever which was dated in 1773. Says he purchased the Improvements at that time & pd £35 N Y for them. After the purchase he fenced a good part of it, & thinks when he left it the Improvements were worth 100 cur. He built a House & Barn which he values at 50 Cury. His Stock, one Horse, Wheat Corn Hay &c were all taken by the Rebels. Says the Landlord has Possession of the Lands. Produces affidavit of George Finckle & Peter Esseltine to the justness of the claim. His Papers were all taken by a Col Paterson" (From the Second Report of the Bureau of Archives for the Province of Ontario, 1904, Vol. 1, p. 368).

After his enlistment in Colonel Fanning's regiment, on his return journey to his home, on the recruiting errand spoken of above, he was taken prisoner while attempting to make his way through the American lines in disguise. He and his companion were tied together with ropes and conveyed to a private residence, where they were tried by court martial and sentenced to death. At the time he wore upon his little finger his wife's wedding ring, wrapped around with a strip of cotton, as if his finger was injured. He and his wife had exchanged their wedding rings engraved with their names, at the time of their parting, when he had started for New York, not knowing if ever they would meet again. As he and his fellow prisoner were being led out of the house where the court martial had been held, to await their execution, Conrad saw a look of commiseration in the lady of the house. Instantly surmising that he had her sympathy, he slipped the ring, with its covering, from his finger, and contrived to pass it to her without a word, unnoticed by the guard who had charge of the prisoners. During the night he and his companion made their escape and fled to the shelter of a swamp, lying part of the time, while the pursuit after them was hot, with only a part of their faces out of the water, to enable them to breath. They finally got away and Conrad subsequently rejoined the British army. Years afterwards, when peace had once more settled down upon the land, and Conrad and his family were far away from the scene of his narrow escape, on the shore of the Bay of Quinte, he received a letter from the tender hearted lady to whom he had given the ring, returning it to him. He had not even known her name until the coming of her letter, and often afterwards he spoke with gratitude of her genuine loyalty and fidelity as that of a true heroine.

Conrad Van Dusen served in Colonel Fanning's regiment during the whole term of the war, as noted above in his testimony. The regiment was most actively engaged in the Carolinas. The following extracts of the dates of musters of the regiment, in which Conrad's name appears, were copied by Captain Albert H Van Deusen, the compiler of this work, from the original documents.

"MUSTER ROLL of the GRANIDIER of the KING'S AMERICAN REGIMENT Whereof EDMUND FANNING ESQ. is Colonel Commanded by Major John Coffin. Flushing Fly (Long Island: June 12, 1783). The Fanning Regiment was organized in December, 1776, and early part of 1777, by the efforts of Governor Tryon and his son-in-law, Edmund Fanning. The Corps formed part of the expedition which captured Forts Clinton and Montgomery on the Hudson, in October, 1777. In July, 1779, it accompanied Tryon in the expedition in which New Haven was plundered, and Fairfield and Norwalk, Connecticut, reduced to ashes. It saw its hardest fighting in the Carolinas, and was present at the capture of Charlestown in 1779. It was considerably reduced at the battle of King's Mountain, but recovered sufficiently to participate in the battle at Camden, April, 1781, in which General Green was defeated by Lord Rawdon.

At the close of the struggle the Corps had dwindled to about one third its original strength, and the majority of the remnant emigrated to New Brunswick, Canada, settling a little below Woodstock, on the St. John River. Their lands were not very good, however, and many had abandoned them before the grant was issued, August 17, 1787.

Dr. Canniff, in his work, The Settlement of Upper Canada, states that Conrad Van Dusen was a member of the notorious guerilla Company, Butler's Rangers, which desolated the infant settlement of Wyoming, Pennsylvania, in 1778. An examination of the "Old United Empire Book," at the Crown Lands Office, Toronto, Canada, in which the names of these Rangers are entered, disproved this statement; Conrad's not being found among them. He was the only Tory of his family, but this did not divide him from their affections, as is proved by the fact of his brother, Casper, who was a Patriot, emigrating with him to Canada, after the great struggle was over. Both had fought to uphold that which he deemed right, and we must bear in mind that, whatever the spirit of the British tory, which led to the Revolution, the American tory and loyalist was often a man whose heart and head were with the quarrel of the Colonies, but whose conscience forbade his taking up arms against the King, in the doctrine of whose "Divine right" he had been trained. Immediately after being discharged from the service, Conrad joined his family, which he conducted to New York. On descending the Hudson River, his second child, Susannah, died and was buried at Kingston, N. Y.

Conrad Van Dusen and his brother, Casper, grandfather of the compiler of this work, were of the party which left New York in September 1783, under the leadership of Major Peter Van Alstyne of Kinderhook for Canada. Their vessel was escorted by the British Man-of-War Hope, which piloted them along the Atlantic coast and up the St Lawrence River as far as Sorel. There the party wintered, built bateaux, and in the Spring, with provisions and supplies furnished by the British Government, started on their perilous journey of ascending the great river to Lake Ontario. About a month before leaving Sorel, the degrees of the Masonic fraternity were conferred upon Conrad Van Dusen by Unity Lodge No. 73 of Quebec. The records of this old Lodge were lost in the early part of the last century, but the certificate of Conrad's membership is still in existence, of which the following is a copy.

On June 16, 1784, the party reached their destination on the Bay of Quinte, about thirty miles west of Catarauqui, later known as Kingston, at a place then known as Fourth Town, and later as Adolphustown. Here they landed and drew lots for the choice of land; heads of families having the preference. And here, under the most trying circumstances, they began once more that pioneer life from which their families had but recently emerged in the Colonies; hewing their homes out of the virgin forest, as their fathers had done before them.

Conrad was a man of affairs in the little settlement. His first location was on the west half of lot 14, First Concession, which was patented to him April 5, 1797. He opened a house of entertainment, or tavern, where most of the meetings for the transaction of business were held. Here the fathers met to smoke their pipes and quaff their mugs of beer, while they settled the knotty questions of the community; while in an adjoining room their lads and lassies were enjoying themselves in their fashion, to the merry strains of the dance inviting fiddle.

For about fourteen years they lived the usual life of pioneers and were without any religious life, excepting such as lingered in the hearts of individuals in the settlement. But a change was now dawning. The Reverend William Losee, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, made his way through the wilderness on a missionary journey from Albany to Canada. When he reached Adolphustown Conrad Van Dusen entertained him at his tavern and the dancing hall was put at his disposal for preaching. The music of the fiddle gave place to the sweet sound of the gospel of the grace of God to poor needy sinners. The neighbors flocked in from far and near to listen to the "good news from a far country," and a wave of revival spread over the community. Conrad was one of the early converts, and, with true purpose of heart, he took an axe and chopped down the sign post of his tavern, and turned his bar into a meeting place for prayer. From that time on, to the close of his long life, he was a faithful and consistent follower of his Saviour, and filled the office of Circuit Stewart and Class Leader for many years. He died in great peace on November 3, 1827, and was buried in what is now called the Old U. E. Burying Ground, near the Courthouse at Adolphustown. His wife, Millicent Hoover, survived him two years, and lies buried beside him.

Mr. Losee lingered among the little congregation where he had reaped such a harvest of souls, and soon the question of a regular meeting-house, or church, arose. It was agreed to build one, with Mr. Losee as minister. The original deed of the land for this church, written in the beautiful hand of Arra Ferguson, brother to Millicent Hoover, is still in existence, in the possession of Mr. H. Allison of Adolphustown, and was copied by the compiler of this work in August, 1899. It is a valuable record of the names of most of the heads of the families at that time, and by it we see that Conrad was the largest subscriber to the building fund.

“Adolphustown, Feb. 3rd, 1792. Dear Friends and Brethren. As Almighty God has been pleased to visit us in this wilderness land with the light of a preached Gospel, we think it requisite to build a Meeting-house or Church for the more convenient assembling of ourselves together for social worship before the Lord.

“We do agree to build the said church under the direction of William Losee, Methodist preacher, our brother who has labored with us this twelve months past, he following the directions of the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, or in his absence under the direction of any assistant Preacher belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church in Great Britain or America, sent from there by proper authority (such as the Bishop) to labor among us. We do further agree to build said church thirty-six feet by thirty feet, two stories high with gallery in the upper story or second story. Said house to be built on the north west corner of Paul Huff's lot of land, No. 18, third concession, Fourth Town.

“We the subscribers do promise to pay, or cause to be paid to the Directors towards the building of the said church as it is wanting, the sums of money annexed to our names underneath where we have hereunto set our hands the date above written.

202 CASPER VAN DUSEN, son of (99) Robert Van Duesen and Catherina Van Ham of Albany and Dutchess Counties, N. Y.; b in Dutchess Co. April 19, 1761; d Dec. 23, 1838, at his home in Sophiasburg, Prince Edward Co., Upper Canada; m in Adolphustown, Upper Canada, by Peter Van Alstyne, J. P., Feb. 16, 1786, HANNAH MARY SHORTS; b Jan. 23, 1766; d at Hilton, Brighton Township, Northumberland Co., Canada, Oct. 26, 1862, at the advanced age of ninety-six years; having survived her husband for twenty-four years. She lies buried at Hilton. An account of her parents will be found in Miscellaneous and Related Families.

Casper was a patriot during the Revolutionary War, serving in Capt. Israel Vail's Company, Second Regt., Dutchess Co.

Militia, Col. Morris Graham; and also in the Sixth Dutchess Co. Regt. There is record of his service from Oct. 10, to Nov. 23, 1779. His elder brother, Conrad, was a loyalist, and suffered the confiscation of his property. The difference in opinion does not seem to have divided their affections, however, for both Casper and Conrad were of the party, mostly composed of loyalists, who left New York in September, 1783, under leadership of Maj. Peter Van Alstyne, J. P., of Kinderhook, to seek a new home in Canada. They settled on the Bay of Quinte, in the Fourth Town, later called Adolphustown. Casper's land lay on the west half of Lot 13, and east half of Lot 14 (Conrad was on the west half of Lot 14) Second Concession, 200 acres, which was patented to him Aug. 31, 1801 and July 23, 1804. The following extracts from Council Proceedings refer to this land. "ORDER IN COUNCIL giving effect to the proceedings of the Commissioners in 1800, for the Eastern District, Dist. of Johnstown & Midland District. Gasper Van dusen claims the west half of lot number thirteen in the second Concession of Adolphustown. Allowed."

"Gasper Vandusen claimes the east half of lot number 14 in the second concession of Adolphustown."

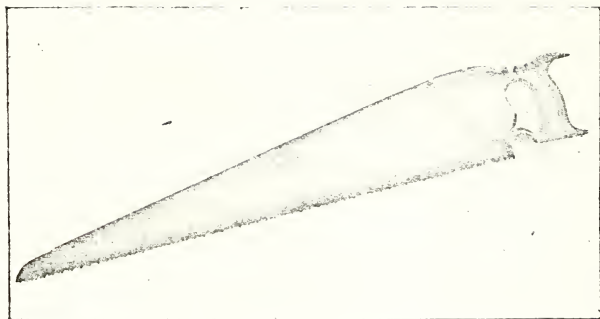

"No. 59. To his Excellency Peter Hunter Esqr. Sr General Commanding his Majesty's Province of upper Canada etc. May it please your Excellency In the year 1796, a description passed my office in favor of Capt. Abraham Mabee, for the East half of lot No 14 in the 2d Cons upon General Haldimans Certificate, & according to the Entry on the Quebec plan of Adolphustown.

"In the year 1798 this land was allowed by the Commissioners to Gasper Vanduser, but the claim could not be carried into Effect, because the deed has been passed & issued to Capn Mabee.

"On the Quebec Plan Capn Mabee is entered on the East half, & John Hartman, from whom Vanduser's claim is deduced on the west half but it seems that Mabees improvements are on the West half & Vandusers on the East.

"Mabee is willing to surrender his deed, or convey to Vanduser provided he can get another for the west half; or if this cannot be done, as Vandusen and Maybee are evidently entitled to the lot between them, Maybee having already gotten one half, the other might be granted should your Excellency see proper, to Vandusen & the parties could then make the necessary exchange themselves.

"If the entry on the Quebec plan had been made right in the first instance to mabee, nothing could have impeded Vandusers claim; if any expedient of the above kind therefore, can be adopted the mistake will be rectified, the embarressment of the Parties got rid of, & they are willing to acquies in such order, as to your Excellency in your wisdom, may deem meet to give.

Saw, issued among other tools by British Government to Casper Van Dusen after his arrival in Canada in June, 1784, with the Van Alstoye party of loyalists from New York; now in the possession of William Albert Van Deusen of Madison, Wisconsin.

The records of the Land Office at Napanee, Ont., show that the east half of Lot 14, second concession, Fourth Town (Adolphustown), was deeded by the Crown to Captain Abraham Mabee April 5, 1797; and on July 23, 1804, the same parcel of land was deeded by the Crown to Gasper Vanduser. It contained 100 acres. On Feb. 24, 1809, Casper sold this land to Daniel Haight for £100-0-0, having previously, Jan. 26, 1803, sold the adjoining piece of property, the west half of Lot 13, to the same person; price not stated.

Casper did not remain at Adolphustown. In 1797 he moved to Sixth Town, later Sophiasburg, across the narrow bay, in Prince Edward County. Here he took up Lot 18, on the "High Shore," which was patented to him by the Crown Dec. 7, 1803, and contained 200 acres. On this homestead he passed the remainder of his life, and was a prominent and useful member of the community. Under the faithful ministrations of the Rev. William Losee, he, too, was converted to Christ; his whole after-life being stamped with that simplicity of spiritual life which left no doubt as to the heart fully won. The Rev. Dr. Green, writing in 1860, says of him at this turning point in his life, that "when first converted he was very ignorant of religious matters, and when he stood up to say grace at table he repeated 'And now I lay me down to sleep,' these being the only religious words he could think of, and doubtless they were acceptable to God. But he was an apt scholar in the school of Christ, and I have heard him pray and speak at meetings with much propriety and great power. His widow is still living, and is probably the only survivor of the first class formed by Mr. Losee." He became a class leader, and an active participant in the religious life of the settlement; with his own hands assisting to build the first church of the Methodist denomination in this district, the Hallowell Meeting-house, better known as the Old Congers Church. It is still in existence, and is the oldest Methodist Church now in use in the Province of Ontario. He also gave liberally of his worldly goods for this purpose, as will be seen in the following interesting extracts from original memoranda, taken from the old memorandum book of the Hon. Stephen Conger, J. P., in reference to the building of the Hallowell meeting house:

Casper Van Dusen lived to the ripe age of seventy-seven. He died Dec. 23, 1838, and lies buried in the old Conger's Church graveyard. He and his wife used the Dutch language. Many references to him and to his brother, Conrad, will be found in the histories of the settlement of this part of Canada (See Pioneer Life on the Bay of Quinte, p. 60; Playter's History of Methodism in Canada, p. 32; etc).

Battalion of Albany Militia, under the command of Col. Abraham C. Cuyler. Also, during the Rev. War, in the First Albany County Militia, under the same Colonel. He d March 11, 1825. In 1835 his widow was an applicant for a pension. In her petition she states that he served in Capt. Nicholas Jeroleman's Comp., under Col. Jacob Lansing.

In November, 1788, Peter Van Deusen and Jacob Van De Bilt established a soap and candle factory for the convenience of the citizens of Albany; which useful business, they say in their advertisement, had long been wanted in that city. As an inducement to the citizens to encourage these domestic manufactures, they offered their goods at New York prices; thus saving the freight and cartage. Also, as a further inducement, they offer to manufacture candles, for those who provide their own tallow, at 2 1-2 pence per pound, and furnish the wicks themselves (Munsell's "Annals of Albany," Vol. 2, p. 207).

243 MATTHEW VAN DUSEN presumably the son of (111) Andries (Andrew) Van Deusen and Elisabeth Ute, or Ott, of New York; b Sept. 2, 1759, probably in Philadelphia, Pa.; d at Philadelphia Nov. 30, 1812; m in that city, in Christ Church, by the Right Rev. William D. White, D. D., Dec. 24, 1783, to LYDIA BREHAUT; b April 18, 1766; d Sept. 19, 1814; dau of Nicholas Brehaut of Philadelphia, a Huguenot from Guernsey, Channel Islands, and Elizabeth Bonnells. Mr. Van Dusen's will, which was dated Nov. 6, 1812, was probated Dec. 5, 1812, and that of his widow, dated Sept. 16, 1814, was probated Oct 14, 1814.

Matthew Van Dusen was a prominent citizen and ship-builder of Philadelphia, Pa. It is not known whether he was born in that city, but he must have moved there while a very young man, if he was born in New York, of which city his parents were residents, and where their three eldest children were baptized. In 1795 he purchased the old historic Fairman property in Kensington, Philadelphia. The Fairman mansion, which stood upon this ground, was built by Thomas Fairman in 1682. Here Fairman entertained William Penn as a member of his family until Penn's own home, Letitia House, was completed building. Other notable guests of Fairman were Markham, Haige, Howe and his children. Near this house stood the famous "Treaty Tree," under which William Penn made his treaty with the Indians in May, 1682. In 1682 Fairman moved to Tacony, another part of Philadelphia, but his widow appears to have occupied the mansion in 1711. Watson, in his annals of Philadelphia, Vol. 1, pp. 134-146, gives a history of this house and the treaty, with an illustration of the house and the elm tree. The elm was blown down in 1810 and the house, which was built of brick, was removed in 1825. Mr. Van Dusen purchased it for $385, there being at the time a mortgage of $2,666.66 upon it. His family occupied the house until its removal in 1825. Miss Fairman's Mansion, Philadelphia; built 1702, taken down 1825; the residence of Matthew Van Dusen for many years. Facing the mansion is seen the historic tree known as Penn's "Treaty tree." It was blown down in 1810. It was 284 years old and its girth 24 feet.

Tiers, in Martin's History of Chester County, Pa., p. 53, says: "The ground, on which the Treaty Elm of Penn stood, belonged to Mr. Matthew Van Dusen at the time the tree was blown down, March 1, 1810. My uncle, Mr. Franklin Eyre, owned the property immediately adjoining, and to him Mr. Van Dusen made the proposition that if he would have the entire trunk sawed into planks, he might have half the wood. This Mr. Eyre gladly acceded to, and afterwards he received permission to possess himself of the roots. This root is in the Museum of the Young Men's Moravian Missionary Society, Bethlehem, Pa. An illustration of this house is given with this sketch.

On Apr. 19, 1842, he filed application (No. 10,860) for a pension, in which he gave the following account of his services. In the year 1777 he was living with his father in the town of Cornwall; about July 1, 1777, he served in Capt. Parson's Comp., Col. Mc Laughren's Regt., for about one month and a half at Fort Montgomery; in 1778 he was drafted out of Capt. Christopher Van Duzen's Company and was under the command of different officers and engineers, working at building Fort Put from about 1st of May until 25th of June; in 1779 he was drafted out of Capt. Christopher Van Duzer's Company to the command of Capt. Joseph Wood, serving from about the first of July until the first of Oct. of that year at Block House No. 3, near Fort Put; that in 1780 he was similarly drafted, when he was attached to Capt. Freeman's Comp., Col. Lamb's Regt., commencing service in August and continuing two months. In 1781 he was under the command of Capt. Tilford, serving at West Point about two months and a half, and also rendered other services. He had no records of his services, and was unable to prove them by witnesses, owing to the death of his comrades. His claim was rejected for lack of proof. B. Vandusor of Bloomingburg, Sullivan Co., N. Y., was his agent.

288 ISAAC VAN DUZER, eldest son of (138) Christopher Van Duzer and Juliana Tusten of Warwick, Orange County, N. Y.; b Feb. 9, 1773; d June 24, 1847; m June 29, 1794, KETURAH REEVE, dau of Selah Reeve and Keturah Strong; b Aug. 28, 1775; d Apr. 20, 1852. They resided at Cornwall and also at Warwick, N. Y.

Isaac Van Duzer was a man of eminence in his day and community. He was a member of the State Assembly in 1823, and was an eminent lawyer and Justice of the Peace. He conducted his business affairs with acumen and judgment, and was engaged in important enterprises. While a resident of Cornwall he owned and operated the first Hudson River steam-boat which carried at the same time both freight and passengers. It was built under his direction, and was fitly named "The Experiment." It proved a financial success.

He was endowed with brilliant intellect, and interested in all things of culture. His book-shelves were rich in English literature. Here were found the early dramatists, the essayists, and the great poets, with translations from the Greek and Latin classics. In religious belief Mr. Van Duzer was a Unitarian. He was a member of Farmers' Lodge No. XIII, Ancient York Masons, held at Deckertown, Sussex County, N. J., as shown by a certificate, dated June 24, 1802, signed by Ebenezer Mead, Master; George Baxter, Senior Warden; Samuel Vanfleet, Junior Warden; and Samuel Barclay, Secretary; under seal of the Lodge. His own signature to the certificate is witnessed by a William Vanduzen, presumably his brother. This interesting document, with his beautiful satin apron, hand painted and embroidered, is in the possession of his granddaughter, Miss Mary H. Burt of Warwick.

Isaac Van Duzer's son, Isaac Reeve Van Duzer, a prominent member of the Bar of Orange County, N. Y., inherited his father's literary tastes and strong mental capacity. He died early, cutting short a career that held promise of great fame.

Five generations have broken bread in the stately home which Isaac Van Duzer built, and from which he dispensed a princely hospitality. It is still occupied by one of his descendants, and the keen commanding eyes of Isaac Van Duzer still flash down from the portrait that hangs upon the wall with all the old challenging vivacity of his unconquerable spirit.

Stone, 24 Feb. 1853, ELIZA MARTIN, who survived him.

After the regular course of study at the public schools, William Van Deursen entered Rutgers College, graduating with the Class of 1809, of which he was Valedictorian. He then went to New York for the purpose of studying medicine, and served as Surgeon and Physician in one of the hospitals there, becoming eminent in his profession. He took up a private practice in Monmouth County, N. J., and later returned to his native city to practice, establishing a reputation for professional skill which he maintained until his retirement from the active duties of his calling. At the time of his death he was the oldest living Trustee of Rutgers College, having been elected in 1823.

True to the martial instinct of his race, we find Dr. Van Deursen taking part in the War of 1812. He was Acting Surgeon's Mate in Colonel R. Bogardus' Regiment, the 41st U. S. Inf. (Wid. pen. Ctf. 25,107). In November, 1878, his widow was living at 17 Christopher Street, New York City; then one of the substantial residential parts of the city, and still, though its glory has passed, showing traces of its former elegance.

323 REV. ROBERT VAN DUSEN, son of (164) Johannes Van Deusen and Lydia Sly of Queensbury; b there Jan. 24, 1790; d Feb. 3, 1888, at Queensbury; m (1st) May 18, 1816, ABIGAIL CROSS, who d Jan. 1, 1840; (2d) Aug. 30, 1840, IRINDA DAYTON. The following sketch of Mr. Van Dusen was written by his granddaughter, Mrs. Merritt Cadner:

“Glens Falls, N. Y., Jan. 23, 1903. Robert Van Dusen, the well known citizen of this town, died Feb. 3, 1888, aged 98 years and ten days. He was a son of John Van Dusen and Lydia Schley, and, as his name indicates, of Dutch ancestry. His parents came from Dutchess County in the year 1786 and settled in the town of Queensbury, five miles west of the village of Glens Falls, where he was born. He was one of eleven children, all of whom he survived. He went to Plattsburg in the War of 1812 as a drummer, subsequently drawing a pension as a musician. His old fashioned, long bodied snare drum survives him in good order, as a family heirloom. A clock nearly as old as himself stands in the old homestead, and a bible, published in Edinburgh in 1785, a small octavo volume, bound in black leather, lies on the table. When about twenty-three years old he cleared the farm (about two miles from his birth place) where he subsequently lived till his death. His family were remarkably long lived, his brothers and sisters, with one exception, having lived beyond four score. No death had occurred in the family for forty-eight years. A widow of eighty-eight years and nine children survive him, all residing in the vicinity of the old home. The children are Mrs. Chloe Stevens, Mrs. Lydia Sturdevan, Mrs.

Martin Wilkie, and the sons, Hiram, Abner, Archibald, Halsey, Sidney and Ransom. He was a man of staunch integrity, fair in his dealings and temperate in his habits, having never used tobacco. When about twenty years old he came to what is known as the experience of religion. He had always believed in religion, but at that time religion became a thing of faith to him, and from that time he maintained a consistent christian character. The bible became his Book, and when he could not read he would ask others to read to him his favorite passages. With no special disease upon him, the time of his departure came, and quietly he breathed out his life, resting to the last his faith in Jesus. He was a good man, a good citizen, a true friend, and a loving husband and father."

Lieut. Nathaniel Callender was a Revolutionary soldier, and was the brother of Capt. Callender who went into Fort Ticonderoga with Col. Ethan Allen (Roland Robinson's History of Vermont). The father of Diadema Dewey was also a Revolutionary soldier from Sheffield, Mass.

Like so many others of the name, Martin Van Deusen was a soldier. He served during the war of 1812 in the 154th Regt., N. Y. State Infantry, in Capt. Squire Bartholomew's Company, Lieut. Col. Pline Adams. When not fighting for his country, he was serving it as a Justice of the Peace at White Hall, N. Y., where he died July 18, 1845. He was commonly called "Squire Van Deusen." His widow received one hundred and sixty acres of land in 1855, as bounty for his services. She married again.

367 HENRY COON VAN DUSEN, son of (201) Conrad Van Dusen and Hannah Coon of Adolphustown and Marysburgh, Ont.; b at Adolphustown Jan. 16, 1786; d July 28, 1871; m Jan. 27, 1807, by Rev. Robert McDowall, to MARY HUFF; b Feb. 13, 1791; d June 23, 1870; dau of Solomon Huff (b 1751, d 1828) and Eva Swade (b 1757) of Adolphustown. Solomon Huff is said to have been a brother of Paul Huff, and to have served in the army during the Revolutionary War (Pioneer Life on the Bay of Quinte), but the records of such service have not been found, nor did he file a claim, as did Paul, for property abandoned.

In the church registers of the Rev. Robert McDowall there appears the record of the marriage of a Henry Vandusen to Hannah Hartman of Ernesttown, but who this Henry was has not been found. From the dates it was at first supposed to be the second marriage of Henry Coon Van Dusen, but his grandchildren, still living, are assured that he was married only once, to Mary Huff. He was a man of wealth and social prominence, and was everywhere known as "Judge Van Dusen."

456a MARYTIE (MARIA) VAN DEUSEN, dau of (236) Mattheus Van Deusen and Cornelia Van Wie, b Feb. 2, bp Feb. 15, 1775; d in 1849; m Dec. 31, 1796, HENRY VAN DER ZEE, son of Albert Van der Zee and Hester Houghtaling; b in 1772; d Oct. 8, 1838.

When Marytie Van Deusen and her sister Katrina were married, their uncle Arent Van Deusen gave each of them $10,000 in gold and silver coins, in bags, and each of them also received fifteen slaves as a wedding gift. Some interesting old heirlooms of this family are still in the possession of living descendants. Miss Margaret Burhans Haswell of Albany, N. Y., has among other things, a tablecloth which has, in each of the four corners, the embroidered initials of her mother, Hester Van der Zee; her grandmother, Marytie Van Deusen; her great-grandmother, Cornelia Van Wie; and her great-great-grandmother, Magdalena Luke; also some pewter plates with the initials "M. L." (Magdalena Luke), and two with "P. W.," the initials of Pieter Winne, who was the second husband of Cornelia Van Wie. Miss Haswell's mother remembered Cornelia Van Wie, who was her grandmother, quite well, and of Pieter Winne coming to her father, Henry Van der Zee, with the proposition that if he would take care of him and his wife for the remainder of their days he would leave him all of his property, which Mr. Van der Zee did not accede to, not considering it right to thus become possessed of the Winne property.

Henry Van der Zee owned seven hundred acres of rich farmland on the Onisquethaw Creek, in Albany County, N. Y., lying partly in the town of Bethlehem and partly in Coeymans. Upon this estate he built a fine stone mansion, which is still in excellent preservation and admired for its handsome appearance. Here he and his wife passed the remainder of their days and the children of his daughter Cornelia grew up.

Edwin Van Deusen, D. D., was educated at Trinity College, N. Y. Soon after his graduation he received his first call as assistant at St. Paul's Church in Baltimore, where Rev. Dr. Wyatt was rector. Here he remained about three years, when he accepted a call to Oxen Hill, Md. After a few years there he was sent to St. Anne's Church, Annapolis, Md., where he remained about eight years, then going to the old Swedes Church in Wilmington, Del. From there he went to St. Peter's Church, Pittsburg, Pa., where he was rector for twenty years, then going to Grace Church, Utica N. Y., as successor to Rev. Dr. Leeds, who had resigned to accept the call to Grace Church in Baltimore. This was his last rectorship and embraced about nineteen years. Upon his resignation in Utica, Dr. Van Deusen left the active service of the ministry and went to reside in Carroll County, Md., where he lived for five years. He then went to Baltimore to reside with his son, in whose home he died. His body was taken to Utica, N. Y., for burial, the services there being conducted by Rev. Charles F. Olmstead of Grace Church, where Dr. Van Deusen had officiated for so many years. He had many friends who loved and admired him for his worth and sterling character.

Isaac Reeve Van Duzer inherited much of his father's brilliant mind and ability, and had the advantage of his early training in addition to the best educational facilities. He chose the Law as a profession, to which his keen, astute mind was particularly adapted. He was well launched on what promised to become a brilliant career, when his early death cut short all the hopes centered in him. He was considered a great loss to his profession, as also to the community. He was member of the State Assembly in 1832 and 1833. Mrs. Van Duzer survived him many years. She died Feb. 21, 1885.
